ACCUSED COUNTESS GAINS SYMPATHY

FIRST HUSBAND SHOT RIVAL

Who Died in Countess Tarnovsky's Arms—Declares Count's Brutal Treatment Led to Her Misdoings.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VENICE, March 13.—Countess Marie Tarnovsky, on trial with her maid, Marie Perier; a Moscow lawyer named Prilukoff, and a young Russian official named Naumoff, for successfully conspiring to murder her second husband, Count Kamarovsky, may be said to have won her case before one tribunal—that of the public—for there has been a marked change during the latter days of the trial in the demeanor of Venetians toward the auburn-haired woman whom the prosecution has pictured as one of the most cold-blooded and calculating sirens in history.

Whether the favorable verdict of the other tribunal, over which presides the impassive and severe-looking Judge Furinato, will be so easily obtained is a different question, but there is no doubt that the Countess made a deep impression by the recital she began at yesterday's hearing of her life, her loves, and her sufferings.

Permission was accorded her, while telling her story, to leave the cagelike dock in which she and the other prisoners are confined in court, with gendarmes sitting between each two, but she spoke from behind the bars in a voice so low that the Judge frequently had to bid her speak more loudly. The sensation which had previously been caused when Naumoff, sobbing violently, confessed how he shot Count Kamarovsky at the bidding of a woman who had delighted to torture him, was insignificant by comparison with the tremendous impression created by Countess Tarnovsky's recital yesterday.

The Countess spoke in Italian, somewhat slowly, and with a slight drawl full of charm, but with the absence of accent which educated Russians so frequently attain in a foreign language. She presented an inexpressibly striking figure with her dull ivory complexion, lustrous eyes, and wavy brown hair, emphasized by her black raiment. This woman, who spent many thousands of dollars annually on her wardrobe, is an artiste in clothes. Her severely simple black costume and the big hat framing her face are a studied effect. As she spoke her small, slim, long-fingered hands, clad in gray suede, were generally clasped in the manner of one praying, and often as she raised her eyes she looked the picture of a veritable Pieta.

Countess Tarnovsky's story began with her girlhood and school days at an establishment for the daughters of the nobility at Kieff, to which she had been admitted as a descendant of an Irishman named O'Rourke whose sword had carved his fortune in Russia. It was while she was at school that she met her future husband, Count Tarnovsky, who divorced her in 1907. She eloped with him and they were married at a little village church.

Married Life a Tragedy.

Her dreams of happiness were rudely dispelled and her married life soon became a tragedy. Tarnovsky was a brutal drunkard and soon after the wedding he told her of a woman, a certain Baroness, by whom he had had a son. The Countess secretly visited this woman, who, saying she knew Count Tarnovsky better than the young wife, counseled her to conceal her thoughts and feelings on the subject and let her husband sow his wild oats.

Deeply distressed at the revelation of the new world of corrupt society into which she had been thrown by her marriage, she tried to follow this advice, but her husband's treatment of her was such that she fell seriously ill. From the sad, subdued tones in which Countess Tarnovsky recited these details her voice changed to a sharp, angry note as she repudiated the charge that the suicide of her brother-in-law was due to her. It was the result of depression, she declared, caused by his failure to pass certain examinations. She denounced in rapid words of angry scorn the malice of enemies who sought to fix the blame on her.

Borgetsky Her "First Love."

Then her voice grew soft and sweet again as she described how it was only because of her solitude, misery, and despair that she yielded when she met her "first and only love," a Russian named Borgensky. The prisoner told how Borgensky convinced her of his love. A party of gentlemen and ladies were in a garden shooting with rifles. Borgensky loaded his rifle with a ball cartridge and handed it to the lady to fire. Just as she aimed he said to the Countess, "See now how much I love you," and placed his right hand upon the muzzle. The bullet lacerated and shattered his hand.

The Countess told in a few words how Borgensky died. She and her husband supped with him after going to the opera. Borgensky and the Countess left the Count and drove off in a sledge. Borgensky leaned toward her to kiss her. At the same moment a pistol was fired and a bullet, passing through her

LIEUT. JANNEY SHOT DEAD.

Mysterious Killing at Home of Lieut. Col. Ames in Manila Barracks.

MANILA, March 13.—Second Lieut. Clarence M. Janney, Twelfth Infantry, was shot and killed yesterday at Fort William McKinley, probably by his own hand. Considerable mystery shrouds the case, and it is not known whether the killing was intentional or by accident. Army inspectors are now holding an investigation.

Lieut. Janney, accompanied by his wife, attended a dinner party at the house of Lieut. Col. Robert F. Ames. Janney left the party and went to his quarters. He obtained a revolver and returned to the house of Lieut. Col. Ames, on the way to which he fired one shot, presumably in the air.

He entered the house and flourished the revolver. There was an explosion and Janny fell with a bullet in the head. He died instantly.

It was at first reported that Lieut. Col. Ames had shot Janney and guards placed him under arrest, but he was subsequently released.

Lieut. Janney was born in Virginia in 1881. He was first a private in the Twelfth Infantry, but was appointed Second Lieutenant Feb. 11, 1907, provisionally and accepted a few days later.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—No official of the War Department who knows personally either Lieut. Janney or Lieut. Col. Ames could be found late to-night.

Col. Ames has seen active service since 1897. He was appointed from New York and is a native of Rhode Island. He served as Second and First Lieutenant in the Eighth Infantry until March, 1896, when he was commissioned Captain. In 1901 he was commissioned Major in the Sixteenth Infantry, transferred to the Twenty-ninth Infantry a year later, and May 6, 1907, he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of the Twelfth Infantry, now stationed at Manila.

Lieut. Janney was appointed from Virginia, where he was born in 1881. He served as private, Corporal, and Sergeant, Company D, and Battalion Sergeant Major, Sixteenth Infantry, from August, 1903, to February, 1907. He was commissioned Second Lieutenant Twelfth Infantry Feb. 28, 1907, and later assigned to duty at Manila.

LEISHMAN CONTESTS CLAIM.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, March 13.—In reference to the suit begun by Oliver E. Bodington, the Paris lawyer, Ambassador Leishman disclaims any business connection with Bodington. He says the question pending concerns only Bodington and the Comtesse de Gontaut-Biron, Leishman's daughter, who, through her marriage, is a French subject and has no legal connection with her father.

Mr. Leishman says the Countess employed Bodington to settle her succession after her husband's death. Three other lawyers were also employed, and, according to Mr. Leishman, they actually conducted the case. The other three lawyers were satisfied with fees of about $1,000 among them. Bodington received $2,000, but claimed $4,000 more.

Mr. Leishman says the Countess summarily dismissed Bodington because she was dissatisfied with the way he handled the affair. She has asked the court to assess the damages, leaving $10,000 in the hands of the court. This fund is ample to pay Bodington even if his claim is allowed, which Mr. Leishman considers most improbable.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 13.—Oliver E. Bodington arrived here from Paris to-day and was seen to-night at the Carlton Hotel by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent. He declined to discuss the details of his suit begun in Pittsburg, saying simply:

"I am satisfied to leave the question whether or not I was retained by Mr. Leishman to the judgment of the American tribunal. I do not go to law for my fees except in the last extremity, and this is an exceptional step to which I have been forced by Mr. Leishman's outrageous conduct."

ILL FROM SEEKING HER PET.

Mrs. Miller Gives Way Under the Strain—Puts Detectives on Dog's Trail

Mrs. Fannie S. Miller, a wealthy woman living at the Hotel Gotham, was said to be seriously ill yesterday in her apartments at the hotel as the result of exposure in a search she has kept up unceasingly for her pet dog, which was lost on Feb. 14.

Central Office detectives have been assisting Mrs. Miller in her search, and the city has been explored by special detectives, the same methods being pursued as when a person is reported to the police as missing. Mrs. Miller herself has spent days walking through the district in which her pet dog was lost, and has paid semi-weekly visits to all the dog hospitals and homes for stray animals, but to no avail.

Several days ago Mrs. Miller was forced to stay in her apartments and give up the search on account of the strain attendant upon her unceasing vigil. She was also suffering from a severe cold, contracted while braving the rain in trying to run down a clue for her pet. Yesterday she was said to be under a physician's care.

According to the description of the dog which is now in the hands of the detectives, it is a Porto Rican maltese, pure white, with the exception of a small brown spot upon the right ear. The dog weighs eleven pounds, and answers to the name of Uno.

The dog had long been Mrs. Miller's companion, and in the early morning of Feb. 14 it was taken out by one of the servants from the hotel, who walked down Fifty-fourth Street West to Broadway. The dog, being without a leader, became frightened and ran down Broadway toward Times Square with the servant in pursuit. It was last seen turning into Forty-second Street and heading toward Sixth Avenue.

Since that time Mrs. Miller has advertised extensively for the recovery of the dog, and offers now a reward of $50 for its return. In her personal search she has visited hundreds of shops and apartment houses in the vicinity of East Forty-second Street, and sent out inquiries in all directions. An advertisement for the recovery of the dog recently appeared in the Lost and Found columns of THE TIMES.

PLAN OPERA TRUST FOR THREE CITIES

Boston and Chicago Houses Get into Close Relation with the Metropolitan Here.

TO CONTROL OPERA FIELD

Announcement Moves Hammerstein to Jest—He'll Get Along Without Advisory Directors.

The formation of an opera trust is the latest move on the operatic chessboard. It was made known last night in an official announcement that the Boston Opera House, the Metropolitan Opera House, and the new Chicago Opera House are to combine for mutual good, and Henry Russell, the Director of the Boston Opera House, told a TIMES reporter that its object was to control the operatic field.

> With a view to further emphasizing and developing the entente cordiale which already exists between the Metropolitan Opera Company and the Boston Opera Company the Boards of Directors of both institutions have approved the nomination of Giulio Gatti-Casazza to the honorary position of Advisory Associate to the Boston Opera Company and of Henry Russell to the honorary position of Advisory Associate to the Metropolitan Opera Company.
> While it is hoped and believed that the closer relations intended to be established between the two companies and mutual consultation and consideration between their respective managements will be fruitful of good results to all concerned, no joint managership, or any relation resembling such is contemplated, and the two companies and their managements will remain strictly independent of each other.

"The idea is simply this," said Mr. Russell last night. "In order to get stars to sing in New York it is necessary to pay them for a great many more performances than can be given in one theatre. It was thought that the road tour of the company, with performances in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, and The New Theatre, would solve this problem, but it did not. That necessitated doubling the chorus of the Metropolitan and doubling the orchestra. The extra expense exceeded the returns.

"By the new plan Miss Farrar, Mme. Fremstad, Mr. Caruso, and the others will sing eight or ten performances a season in Boston, surrounded by the regular Boston company. Later, perhaps, it will be arranged for them to sing in Chicago in the same manner.

"The idea is to form a trust for the purpose of economy. The arrangement will work in other ways. The singers in foreign countries now have us at their mercy. If we control between us the operatic situation in America, however, there is no reason why we should give foreign singers all they demand.

"This very nearly covers the statement sent out by the Metropolitan Opera Company. However, I shall be very glad at any time to receive advice from Signor Gatti-Casazza in regard to opera matters, about which he must know more than I do, and perhaps I can be of some small assistance to him because I speak English and am perhaps more familiar with American business methods."

Upon reading the Metropolitan statement Oscar Hammerstein removed his cigar from his mouth long enough to smile and then dictated this to his stenographer:

> At a meeting of the non-advisory Directors of the Manhattan Opera House Oscar Hammerstein appointed himself ill-advisory Director of the Manhattan Opera House and bad-advisory Director of the Philadelphia Opera House, with the privilege of wearing a straitjacket at an advanced selary.

CONNERS'S BOAT RUNS AWAY.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 13.—There was an exciting time on the lake this afternoon when William J. Conners's motor boat here, the Courier II., which he had entered for the races, ran away. The Chairman of the New York Democratic State Committee and C. A. Cragin, President of the Sterling Engine Company of Buffalo, which built the boat, were standing on the dock watching it making speed trials over the mile course.

The fast craft had gone over the course once, and was ready to make the turn near the bridge when the crew was suddenly thrown out in the water. The boat, which was said to be going at about 36 miles an hour, ran wildly in and out between a number of yachts anchored in the lake. Suddenly it turned due northward, went between the pilings under the bridge and straight up the lake out of sight.

Mr. Conners jumped into the fast motor boat Eloise and started out to resuce his men, who were picked up by the ferry after they had dived to escape the Courier II., which had borne down upon them after they had been thrown out. Earl Coleman of Buffalo, the engineer, and Edward Fowler, a mechanic, escaped without injury, but Fred Orr, the mechanic, had a deep gash cut in his head when he dived to escape the boat. In the meantime the Courier II. had gone at full speed up the lake and, escaping launches, sailboats, and yachts by a narrow margin, struck a sandbar, where it was grounded. It is a question to-night whether the damages can be repaired in time for the races on Tuesday.

BRYAN NOT TO BE SENATOR.

So Representative Hitchcock Will Seek the Seat of Burkett.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Representative Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Democrat, of the Second Nebraska District, announced himself to-night as a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Elmer J. Burkett, Republican, whose term will expire next March.

Mr. Hitchcock declared that he would not have thought of becoming a candidate if there had been any "possibility that Mr. Bryan might be induced to allow the use of his name." But he says that Mr. Bryan told him shortly before he left for South America "that he would not permit the use of his name or accept a nomination."

If he receives the Democratic nomination Mr. Hitchcock says that he will "invite the Republican candidate for Senator to join him in submitting the National issues of the day directly to the people by means of a series of old-time public debates." He expressed his belief in the election of Senators by direct vote of the people.

In order not to miss the many notable features in next Sunday's Times it is important to place orders with news dealers to-day.

FIREMEN DISCOVER A TRIPLE KILLING

VICTIM OF MELANCHOLIA

Firemen responding to an alarm sent in by Policeman Lake of the Highbridge Station, who had seen smoke coming from the rear cellar windows of the home of Herman Moritz, a retired real estate dealer, of 2,210 Aqueduct Avenue, the Bronx, broke in the front door at 8:30 o'clock last night and stumbled over the dead body of Mr. Moritz. He was shot in the right cheek and through the head. On the floor beside him lay a revolver, with two cartridges exploded and three still loaded with bullets.

The fire was in the cellar, and there the firemen found the body of 12-year-old Walter Moritz, the younger of Moritz's two sons. He was shot twice in the back of the head and once in the chest, and was dead. His feet were almost in a small blaze which had been kindled. A small heap of rubbish and boxes was blazing directly beneath the cellar stairs. The firemen carried the body of Walter upstairs and put it beside that of his father. Then they went through the house.

In the room on the second floor occupied by the brothers they found the body of George H. Moritz, Mr. Moritz's seventeen-year-old son. The body was in a closet in the room, doubled over a suitcase, the head hanging half out of the door. The boy's clothing was half torn from his body and blood was spattered all over the room. Everywhere were signs of a fearful struggle. The lad had three wounds—one in the chest, another in the abdomen, and a third in his right cheek, where a bullet which had entered his mouth had come forth.

The fire was put out quickly and then Capt. Morris of the Highbridge station sent for Coroner Schongut, who came to the house with his physician, Dr. Thomas Curtin. Borough President Cyrus C. Miller, a friend of Moritz's of twenty years' standing, also heard of the tragedy and hurried to the house, which is a large dwelling set in its own grounds. As soon as he had heard the story he declared that his old friend must have slain his sons and then taken his own life.

"He had been suffering from acute melancholia for some time," said Mr. Miller, "and ever since last Fall had been under treatment by Dr. Jacoby."

The Borough President said only a month ago Moritz had said to him that he did not feel well, and did not feel that life was worth living. From that remark, although he thought nothing of it at the time, Mr. Miller drew the conclusion that his old friend had become insane temporarily, and while in this state had committed the double murder, and then killed himself, after setting fire to his home.

The police and Coroner Shongut decided that it was a case of double murder and suicide, although at first there was an inclination on the part of Capt. Morris and his men to believe that the three deaths might have been the work of a burglar. The fact that only two cartridges were exploded in the revolver found beside Mr. Moritz lent some strength to this supposition, as did the fact that no empty shells were found in the house, although to have fired all the shots of which there was evidence Mr. Moritz must have had to load his weapon more than once.

However, not a thing was missing from the house, so far as the police could see, and when Mrs. Anna Moritz, Mr. Moritz's second wife, to whom he was married two years ago, returned late at night from a visit she had paid to friends in Englewood, N. J., she, too, found everything in the house intact. Her own room showed signs of great disorder, as though some one had ransacked it, or there had been a struggle there, but the police believe now that probably Moritz and one of his sons fought all over the room before the older man managed to fire his revolver. Mrs. Moritz's jewelry and a large sum of money was untouched in the room, and nothing anywhere of value had been disturbed.

Mrs. Moritz gave other information which strengthened the police and the Coroner in their theory of a double murder and suicide. She said that at noon yesterday her husband had mentioned some mutual friends in Englewood and had suggested to her:

"Why don't you take advantage of this fine day to pay them a visit? It has been a long time now since any of us have been to see them, and I do not feel myself like taking so long a trip."

Mrs. Moritz fell in with the suggestion, and left the house soon after noon, leaving her husband conversing with his two sons, of whom, she said, he was exceptionally fond. Augusta Fisher, a maid employed in the Moritz household, gave testimony, too, to Coroner Shongut that to him appeared to dispel all doubt as to the cause of the tragedy.

She said that soon after dinner last evening Mr. Moritz called her and told her that she might as well take the evening off, as he and his sons would be alone together and, expecting no callers, did not need her even to answer the bell. Accordingly the maid went to call upon a girl employed in the family of Frederick Lunsdeck at 2,206 Aqueduct Avenue. She knew nothing of the happenings in the Moritz household until she ran into the street when the fire engines passed and found that it was her employer's house on fire.

Mr. Moritz was only 37 years old, but he had acquired a fortune in the real estate business, and two years ago retired from active business. At that time his health was not of the best, but as time went on the spells of melancholia to which he was subject became more and more infrequent, as the cares of business were removed from his mind, until at last it was thought that he had been quite cured.

GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE SON.

But Lewis Hopkins's Sacrifice Fails, and Death Comes.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Francis Hopkins, 7-year-old son of Lewis Hopkins, grandnephew of Johns Hopkins, founder of the university that bears his name, died to-day of meningitis.

The boy had lain in Providence Hospital seven weeks, and after submitting to two operations the physicians decided that a third, with the transfusion of blood, probably would have his life. The father hurried here on a special train, and a quantity of his blood was transfused to his son.

After the operation the boy rallied, but death resulted from exhaustion following his long illness.

TO CUT OFF FOOD FROM PHILADELPHIA

Strikers Order Bakers, Milkmen, and Grocery Clerks to Stay Away from Work To-day.

ORDER BANKS BOYCOTTED

Central Labor Union Acts After Quiet Day When Car Service Seems Almost Normal Again.

PHILADELPHIA, March 13.—Seeking to demonstrate the strength of organized labor and to enlarge the scope of the sympathetic strike the Central Labor Union to-day directed that all milkmen, bakers, grocery clerks, and other dispensers of the necessities of life should remain away from their usual vocations to-morrow, and until such time as the grievances of the striking carmen shall have been adjusted. It was also resolved that union members withdraw all their money from the banks. Their sympathizers, whether organized or not, are also asked by the promoters of the sympathetic strike to do likewise.

The leaders of the sympathetic strike say that when they endeavored to conduct the movement with some regard for the convenience of the general public, Director of Public Safety Clay and others belittled the effect of the strike. They say they are now determined to draw their lines closely during the present week, the second of the proclaimed general strike.

The union drivers of milk and bread wagons were called upon to strike to-morrow by the resolution adopted to-day by the Central Labor Union. The grocery clerks, 1,000 of whom organized this morning, will quit work to-morrow night. Any one working Tuesday in any line of employment will be considered a non-union man, and expelled from the union of which he is a sember.

Bank Boycott Resolution.

The resolution adopted by the Central Labor Union, calling upon workers to withdraw their funds from all banks, recited that:

> Whereas, Certain bankers have declared their sympathy for the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company in its fight to subdue the Carmens' Union and crush the general strike, and are calling on other bankers to take similar action, and,
>
> Whereas, The banks rest upon the money deposited by the workingmen and women of America, and
>
> Whereas, The workers of the Nation have pledged to the Philadelphia strikers their moral and financial support to the end that they may win in this strike; therefore be it
>
> Resolved, That the Central Labor Union of Philadelphia and vicinity hereby calls upon the workingmen and women of America and their sympathetic friends as their first sympathetic act to withdraw all their funds that they may have on deposit with the banks, thereby teaching the bankers that without the money of the workers their institutions of finance must be a failure as without the labor of the workers all industry must cease.

The resolution was adopted amid great enthusiasm, and nearly 150 labor organizations of this city are expected, it is declared, to obey the request of the resolution within forty-eight hours. The leaders estimate that the organizations and the labor men individually have from $11,000,000 to $15,000,000 on depost in the local banks. They say the iron molders' union alone has about $25,000 on deposit, while the hackmen's union has $9,000 in bank, and most of the well established locals, according to the union men, are in a very sound condition financially.

Following the adoption of the resolution it was announced that more than half a hundred telegrams and letters had been received promising faithful support to the end of the struggle. Summing up the tenor of these communications Charles A. Hope, Secretary of the Central Labor Union, said:

"Organized labor throughout the entire country is prepared to empty its treasuries into this city. All union men have realized that it is a fight to the finish between labor and capital, and that this city is the seat of war in a battle which will have effect throughout the entire country."

It was announced by delegates of the bakers' union that 700 bakers employed in nearly all of the large establishments in this city would also join the strike to-morrow, and a delegate of the milk-wagon drivers' union said that 300 of these workers would quit work. According to members of the Strike Committee nearly 500 butchers will also quit work.

Pressure was brought to bear on the brewery workers, and their representatives voted to join in the general strike despite the orders of their National officers. Before this action was taken the German Trades Section of the Central Labor Union had held a meeting, and voted to expel the brewery workers from membership and to boycott all Philadelphia beer. The brewery workers then held a special meeting, and decided to join the strike.

Business Men Hold Meeting.

The Committee of Thirty-five appointed by the convention organized by the United Business Men's Association held a long session to-day, but was unable to find any solution of the difficulties which separated the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company and the striking motormen and conductors. The question was referred to a Sub-Committee of Seven, who will report to the whole committee at some future date.

The Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company says that it was able to operate practically a normal Sunday schedule to-day. Seven hundred and forty cars were run during the day and 540 to-night.

Two hundred new motormen and conductors reached here to-day, 120 of whom were from Indianapolis and fifty from Buffalo. About seventy of the recently employed men were discharged by the company in its efforts to weed out the undesirable element of its new employes.

Until the action of the Central Labor Union was known the authorities here had been looking for a big break to-morrow in the ranks of those who are striking in sympathy with the carmen in their fight with the Rapid Transit management. Many have in fact already returned to work, and a police canvass, it was said, showed that thousands would do so to-morrow. A Superintendent at Cramp's Shipyard declared to-day that despite the extraordinary efforts of the leaders of the sympathetic strike not a single one of the 5,000 employes of the big plant walked out. "Not even a boy quit," said this official. "They had the yard surrounded by pickets, and men were visited at their homes and places of social gathering, but we did not lose one."

According to police information hundreds of the sympathetic strikers at the Baldwin Locomotive Works will return to work to-morrow. The bricklayers and carpenters, it is also said, will resume Monday or Tuesday, and other trades will follow this example.

Small Riot Over Car Afire.

The only disorders here to-day occurred late in the afternoon, when a fire in a box car filled with hay on a railway siding in Kensington collected a crowd of several thousand persons. Small boys threw stones at some of the police, and FAMOUS PAINTING STOLEN.

Millet Worth $10,000 Cut from Frame at San Francisco Exhibition.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 13.—While many persons were passing along a corridor between 9 and 10:30 this morning, a thief entered the Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park, cut Millet's painting, "Shepherd and Flock," from its frame, and carried it through the door past two policemen on guard.

The painting, which is valued at $10,000, is the property of Miss Sarah M. Spooner of this city, who is now traveling in Europe. It was purchased from T. D. Trinon of the Rue Lafayette, Paris. The canvas is 21 inches by 17 inches. Two other paintings were loaned to the art museum by Miss Spooner, Dupres's "Twilight," and a landscape by Daubigny. The Dupres, a larger canvas, is valued at $30,000.

Alexander Lawson, the curator of the museum, says that shortly before the theft was discovered he saw a poorly dressed man lugging a bundle out, but a crowd was visiting the hall at the time and he attached no importance to the incident. The picture was cut out with a very sharp knife or a razor, as the burlap which covered the back was not disturbed. It is believed that the thief was an expert, and after removing the canvas rolled it on a cane and carried it from the building unobserved.

ARTIST DIES ON OCEANIC.

Willis E. Davis, Wealthy San Francisean, Had Sought Health Abroad.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—Willis E. Davis, a wealthy artist, died of heart disease on board the liner Oceanic last Friday when the boat was two days out from Cherbourg, according to a dispatch sent by wireless and received to-day by F. W. Van Sicklen, his brother-in-law.

ICY BAPTISM IN A GALE.

Hungarian Religious Enthusiasts Sing While a Convert Is Immersed.

CLEVELAND, March 13.—M. B. Granpy, a convert to the "Church of the Living God," a Hungarian sect, was led to the lake shore to-day, a hole was broken in the ice, and he was immersed in the freezing water.

About 3,000 enthusiasts stood on the shore and prayed and sang as the convert, accompanied by an Elder, stepped out on the ice, and in company with his sponsor plunged into the water. A piercing gale was blowing, but the onlookers paid no attention to physical discomfort.

HARVARD'S RICHEST STUDENT.

A Millionaire of 45, Head of Large Concerns, Takes Up Business Course.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 13.—Harvard University boasts of as exceptional a student as it has had since its foundation.

He is Daniel Waldo Field of Montello, Mass., who has the distinction of being the richest man in his own right at the university, and also the oldest. Mr. Field is 45 years old, is married, and is enrolled in the Harvard School of Business. He is taking up corporation law.

Besides being a student and millionaire, Mr. Field employs nearly 5,000 hands in his shoe factory at Brockton. He is also President of the Field Lumber Company, the Clark-Hutchinson Company, and five other large concerns.

WEDDING WAS NO SECRET.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 13.—Allen R. Rosenburg and Miss Mabel Kenny of Bridgeport yesterday slipped away to Saugatuck and were married by Town Clerk Hyatt.

Rosenburg had planned to keep his secret until his studies in the Yale Law School were over in June, but in error called a newspaper man into the room to witness the ceremony. The news of the wedding was printed and Rosenburg cannot be found. It is believed that he has gone to Brooklyn to the home of his father, Samuel Rosenburg, to seek forgiveness. He is 22 and his bride is 20.

CALLS PLATT A DISCREDIT.

Charles S. Smith Deplores Putting Flags at Half-Staff for Dead Senator.

Charles Sprague Smith, in presiding over a meeting of the People's Institute at Cooper Union last night, compared the late Senator Platt with James Maginn, who was janitor of Cooper Union up to the time of his death, last Tuesday, and said that the tribute of lowering the flags at the City Hall and the State House would have been more deserved had it been accorded to Maginn.

"James Maginn," said Prof. Smith, "was honored by all who knew him. He had been connected with Cooper Union practically from its inception and all who knew him honored him for his clean character and stearfast life. Thomas C. Platt's whole character was corrupt and he was a traitor.

"I do not know why the flags were lowered for him. I suppose it was because he was once a Senator, but I think it would have been better to have raised the flags to their utmost heights at the State House and the City Hall because the State had been relieved of such a man, who was a discredit to the State."

The speech was applauded.

GERMAN SUFFRAGISTS ASTIR.

Hold Demonstrations in Three Cities, and in Two Clash with Police.

BERLIN, March 13.—Suffrage demonstrations on a small scale occurred here to-day. They were held under the auspices of the Radicals, and for the most part passed off without disorder. Two processions, however, came into contact with the police, who drew their weapons and dispersed the crowds without bloodshed. Several persons were arrested, among them Frau Von Gerlach, wife of the Chairman of one of the meetings.

BRESLAU, March 13.—A large demonstration against the Suffrage bill took place here to-day, but only in one instance were the police compelled to use their swords. The crowds were quickly dispersed, and no one was injured.

David Belasco Ill in Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 13.—David Belasco, New York theatrical manager and producer, came to town to-day to superintend the Chicago production of "The Easiest Way." While on his way here Mr. Belasco suffered an attack of acute neuralgia, and this kept him confined to his room at the Congress Hotel. Physicians attended him constantly throughout the day and night.

WOODRUFF STAYS; ROOT'S ERRAND VAIN

Nobody Talking Much After Long Conferences, but the State Chairman Has Perked Up.

ROOT HAS NOTHING TO SAY

And the Chairman, to Inquiries Whether He'll Stick, Replies, "Ask Root"—Machine on Top, So Far.

Timothy L. Woodruff is still Chairman of the Republican State Committee to-day, despite the visit of Senator Elihu Root to the city and long conferences he held with the local leaders at his home, 733 Park Avenue, yesterday. In fact, as nearly as it was possible to size up the situation last night, Mr. Woodruff has the better of the argument for the time being.

Mr. Woodruff saw Senator Root by appointment at his house at 8 o'clock last evening. They were together for some two hours, after which Mr. Woodruff talked with the reporters in his suite at Sherry's.

"Did the Senator ask you to resign?" Mr. Woodruff was asked.

"Ask Root," he replied with a smile.

"Did he give you to understand that if you refuse to resign as State Chairman a fight would be made against you?"

"Ask Root," reiterated Mr. Woodruff, his smile growing broader.

"Did he tell you that Washington and Albany are allied against you?"

"Ask Root," repeated Mr. Woodruff, and this time he spoke shortly.

This was all Mr. Woodruff would say for publication. He appeared quite pleased with the present situation, and seemed to wish it understood that he is prepared to fight for his leadership to the end.

Root Returning, Defeated.

The only conclusion of importance that could be drawn from the attitude of the leaders last night was that Senator Root will go back to Washington to-day without having accomplished the object for which he came to this city—that of inducing Mr. Woodruff to quit.

The Senator himself was quite uncommunicative. He would not talk about the Republican situation in any way, and answered the reporters who approached him at his house very gruffly. It was evident that he was disappointed. Instead of being the suave, courteous gentleman he usually is, he had become a taciturn statesman having "nothing to say."

Lloyd C. Griscom, the new Chairman of the Republican County Committee, who was with the Senator nearly all the afternoon, adopted the same attitude. Mr. Griscom, representing the Hughes wing of the party, arrived at Senator Root's home at 4 o'clock with James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Speaker of the Assembly. Mr. Wadsworth is a machine "stalwart," and the combination was commented upon with interest. Mr. Wadsworth has long been known as an active opponent of Gov. Hughes and his policies.

The two callers did not leave the Senator's house until after 6 o'clock. They went away hurriedly, without waiting to talk with any one.

Mr. Woodruff arrived at 8 o'clock. He had been out at Garden City all day with William Barnes, Jr., the organization leader at Albany, and the principal worker of the machine up-State. Mr. Woodruff left the house two hours after the others. He appeared much pleased with himself. Senator Root, when seen a few minutes later, was not only impatient, but testy.

No State Committee Call.

As has been known for several days, the Senator's entire object in coming to New York City at this time was to ask Mr. Woodruff to retire from the State Chairmanship. A programme had been drawn up between the New Yorkers in Washington, with the concurrence and assistance of President Taft, to get rid of Woodruff much after the same fashion that William J. Conners, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, was recently eliminated. It was planned to call a special meeting of the State Committee at which Mr. Woodruff would quietly present his resignation, to go into effect at the regular meeting of the committee at the State Convention this Fall.

This meeting will not be held. It is not known exactly what Mr. Woodruff had to say to the Senator last night, but it was made very clear that the arguments he presented were sufficient to make any drastic action at this time impossible.

Observers of New York politics were saying last night that Senator Root would go back to Washington to-day wondering what constitutes a State leadership. The victory of Woodruff is of consequence to President Taft, to some degree, because it is the first time that he has stood with what are called the "insurgents." In other States the National Administration has sided with the "regulars."

The present fight in this State is purely one between "machine" men and "insurgents," and the injection of Senator Root into the situation was understood to be with the consent and connivance of the President. It is even generally accepted that Senator Root came to town on Saturday bearing a message from the President, which practically demanded the resignation of Woodruff, and that he will go back to-day not only without accomplishing his object, but defeated on every side of the argument.

Any conservative line-up of the State Committee had seemed till yesterday to give Woodruff the worst end of the deal. Conceding to him the entire Brooklyn delegation—although that has been doubted in reliable quarters—it seemed that he could not possibly retain control of the committee if it was decided to make a fight against him. Yet he sticks to his position and apparently no fight is to be made, evidently because the result of such a contest now would not be a victory for the National Administration.

Waiting for Roosevelt.

The weakness of the opposing camp all along has been in the fact that no one has been named or brought forward to succeed Mr. Woodruff. The name of Otto T. Bannard, who ran for Mayor on the Republican ticket last Fall, was mentioned at the start, but he emphatically declared that he would not accept the Chairmanship. Then there was talk of George B. Cortelyou, now President of the Consolidated Gas Company. He has definitely declared, however, that he has done with politics for good. Speculation has then gone on down the line, even to Theodore Roosevelt.

Speaking of this last possibility last night one well-informed Republican leader said: "The whole truth is they are all anxious for 'Teddy' to get back and want to get things in shape for his arrival. In making this move against Woodruff at this time they forget that Teddy is the best machine man of them all."

The growing tendency throughout the country toward a division of the party for Roosevelt and against him is assigned by many of the local leaders as the reason back of the present anti-Woodruff agitation, and the indications last night were that the agitation will be a "flash in the pan," to be forgotten and forgiven as soon as possible.

COBB FOR MORE INQUIRY.

With an If, However—Brown May Fight for His Seat.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., March 13.—Sitting in his shirt sleeves in the parlor of his modest home here, Senator George H. Cobb, the new leader of the State Senate, declared this afternoon that he was in favor of a thorough investigation of that body, "if there is anything to investigate." He explained that in the present investigation of the bribery charge made against Senator Allds assertions had been made that in past years money had been given, but that upon cross-examination it had turned out that the money on two occasions had been given to the Republican committee, and on a third occasion it had been decided not to donate.

It is not any investigation, however, that is causing Senator Cobb to worry half so much as the work that lies ahead of him for the next two weeks. He will return to Albany the first thing to-morrow morning to have a conference with Lieut. Gov. White regarding committee matters. The rest of the time will be devoted to uniting the Senators, which he believes will be a hard task after the present division. His elevation leaves vacant the Chairmanship of the Railroads Committee, and vacancies in the Forest, Fish, and Game, the Finance and the Judiciary Committees, which must be filled.

"I will simply do the best I can," he remarked in conclusion.

The Senator's home city, which gave him a fine reception last night, is divided over his position. In one of the speeches last night Mr. Cobb was mentioned as the State's next Governor, and the words were greeted by applause. On the other hand, there is some danger that he will even lose his Senate seat. Ex-Senator Brown would not be loath to return to the Senate. Senator Cobb says he cannot believe that a conference of Senator Brackett and ex-Senator Brown at Albany had any bearing on an attempt to defeat him. Yet others here believe that Brown and Brackett, two of the old insurgents, are working together, and that they have powerful allies in Washington and Albany who would not be averse to punishment of the machine by striking its leader.

CARDINAL PRAISES TAFT.

A Very Democratic Man, Kind and Gentle, Says Mgr. Gibbons.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 13.—Cardinal Gibbons in his sermon at St. Leo's Church this evening paid a high tribute to the character of President Taft. He said that the President was not only a man of strong Christian character, but of a kind and gentle disposition.

"The President is a very democratic man," said the Cardinal. "He is always ready to listen to representatives of the Church. I doubt if any of you have ever had the opportunity of talking with him, because he is such a very busy man."

CAME BACK TO WORRY FLOOD.

Policemen Dismounted for Excise Arrest Make Another Bronx Raid.

Policemen Charles Cunningham and Thomas Keenan, the two zealous young patrolmen who were recently dismounted and transferred out of the Bronx because they had arrested a saloon keeper of influence, had another day off yesterday. Thereupon they joined forces, went back up the Bronx, and enjoyed themselves by making another excise arrest.

After arresting the influential Bronx liquor dealer several weeks ago Cunningham was transferred at the request of Inspector Flood, in charge of the Bronx, to the Eldridge Street Police Station, and Keenan to the Madison Street Station. Together they went into Senden & Schultz's saloon, at 4,214 and 4,216 Third Avenue, yesterday and brought out Joseph Arent, the bartender, who, they charged, had sold them two drinks of whisky, for which they had paid twenty cents. They locked him up in the Tremont Station, and notified their respective stations of their accomplishment.

There were few excise arrests yesterday over the city, although the police got orders on Saturday to close up the saloons this Sunday, but it was somewhat more difficult to get a drink in the Bronx than usual. At the regulation saloons guards were on duty, who had to know the applicant before they would let him in.

In the Raines law hotels, of course, the sacred and indestructible sandwich was brought out and much beer and whisky were consumed. There was only one other excise arrest in the Bronx yesterday besides Cunningham and Keenan's prisoner. Policeman Wilkesman of the Morrisania Station arrested Henry Masterson, bartender of the saloon at 429 East 162d Street, yesterday morning at 2 o'clock, alleging that the bartender was selling liquor to customers in the rear room. Masterson was held in $500 bail for trial in the Morrisania Court before Magistrate Breen.

DR. COOK ON HIS WAY BACK TO NEW YORK

FRIEND TELLS ALL ABOUT IT

A Cordial Reception from Those Who Still Believe Is Expected, and the Doctor May Lecture.

It was learned yesterday that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who was feted in Denmark and by the Aldermen of New York City as the discoverer of the north pole, but failed to "make good" on his story of the discovery, is on his way back to New York from South America. Dr. Cook is expected here on April 2. He has already cabled to the Waldorf-Astoria to reserve a suite of rooms for himself and Mrs. Cook.

According to the plans made known yesterday, Dr. Cook will sail from Rio Janeiro on March 18, and will land at Colon. There he intends to take a steamer for Mobile, Ala., and will then come on here overland.

This information was given to a TIMES reporter yesterday by an intimate friend of Dr. Cook, who has been in communication with him by letter and cable since soon after Cook disappeared from this city months ago.

According to the last report from the doctor he is now enjoying the best of health, as the result of his trip around Cape Horn and across the South American continent, and is anxious to return to New York to see his children.

"Dr. Cook has now recovered entirely from the mental strain to which he was subjected and which broke him down completely during the polar controversy," said the doctor's friend, "and he is now ready and anxious to return home. He has cabled to the Waldorf-Astoria to reserve a suite of rooms for himself and wife, and he will live there quietly for a time until he can make other arrangements.

"There are thousands of people, even here in New York, who still believe in Dr. Cook, and the reception he will have at the hands of his friends will surely be a most cordial one. In many ways he was ill-advised during the controversy. He will now be protected by his intimate friends from any annoyance at the hands of the curious or cranks.

"I have been asked if the doctor will give any more lectures relative to his polar explorations. In reply to this I will say that Dr. Cook looks upon the decision of the Copenhagen scientists as final to a certain degree, although no doubt his friends will make an endeavor to have the decision reversed. We still believe that Dr. Cook has more data at his command, which will help to establish his claim to having reached the north pole. But he does not intend to go on the lecture platform for some time to come, and if he does, it will be to lecture generally about his several arctic and antarctic explorations."

The bundle of furs which Dr. Cook overlooked when he first left the Waldorf, and which left an odorous trail of him there, has been put in cold storage, where the doctor will find them.

Relatives and friends of Dr. and Mrs. Cook in this city seemed surprised last night when TIMES reporters told them that the couple were on their way home. Dr. Cook's brother William, the Brooklyn dairyman, declined to talk about the doctor, even if he was returning to-day, he said. Dr. Cook's friend, Dr. Roswell O. Stebbins, had not received any news of Dr. Cook's return.

But Capt. B. S. Osbon of the Arctic Club of America, who once was a Rear Admiral in the Mexican Navy, and says he is still a warm admirer of Dr. Cook, admitted to a TIMES reporter that THE TIMES's news was correct. He also said that mail had been sent on Saturday to meet the doctor and his wife, and darkly hinted that he, Capt. Osbon, of course knew all about it, though circumstances over which he had no control forbade his saying much at this time.

MISTAKEN FOR DR. COOK.

Berlin Resident Protests at Attentions of Reporters in South America.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 13.—The Berlin office of THE NEW YORK TIMES received the following cablegram to-day from Rio Janeiro:

> Mistaking me for Dr. Cook, reporters are persecuting me throughout South America. Please publish the truth.

The name signed to this cablegram was that of a prominent young American business man who has resided in Berlin for the last eight years. He went to South American in January in behalf of a New York commercial concern which he represents in Germany.

He does not bear the slightest resemblance to the arctic tourist from Brooklyn.

Ten-year-old Mary Weeks, living with her sister, Mrs. Gallagher, at 185 West End Avenue, went to Jersey City yesterday to attend the funeral of a cousin. Crossing the river on her way home last night on the Pennsylvania ferry to Twenty-third Street, she found it was raining, and waited awhile under shelter.

A man wearing a fur coat, dark in complexion, of medium height, and cross-eyed, approached and asked her what was the matter. She told him, whereupon he said: "Oh, come along with me to the elevated station. I have an umbrella."

Accordingly she went with him. They boarded an elevated train, but it seemed to her that she was going downtown, instead of uptown. She "got all mixed up" finally, said she later, and didn't know where she was. The fur-coated man took her to Mulberry Bend Park.

There he met a man, who later said he was Teseta Silviera of 185 Park Row. The fur-coated man asked Silviera for some money, saying, according to Mary: "I want to get a room to put this girl in." At that, Mary Weeks said, she wanted to go home, and began crying. Then a woman joined the group.

Policeman Renahan of the Elizabeth Street Station, who had been narrowly watching the group, walked up to them to investigate. The fur-coated man and the woman walked off. Silviera stood his ground. After hearing the story of Mary Weeks, Renahan locked up Silviera in Elizabeth Street Station on the suspicion of being connected with an attempt to kidnap the girl. Mary was sent home to her sister.

AVALANCHE HITS SNOW PLOW.

Great Northern Line Again Blocked by Snowslide in Washington.

ST. PAUL, March 13.—At the office of the General Superintendent of Transportation of the Great Northern Railway in this city, it was said to-day that an avalanche, a few miles west of Wellington, Wash., at 2 o'clock this morning, buried a rotary snow plow and has again blocked traffic, though it is expected that the line will be cleared some time to-morrow.

Engineer John Annen was seriously injured and has been taken to Seattle. An Italian laborer is missing. These are the only casualties, according to the railroad officials, who say that the engines and crews were not buried in the avalanche.

hat, struck Borgensky in the head. He fell at her feet, clutching her skirts. She caught a glimpse of her husband, who stood, laughing, with a pistol in his hand.

She took Borgensky to his house and nursed him. Her husband sent men to fetch her and she had to go. Borgensky tore off his bandages in despair, believing she had abandoned him. Afterward she escaped her husband and went back to Borgensky, who breathed his last in her arms.

After this dramatic recital the Countess broke down and soon afterward, as she was evidently exhausted by the severe strain, the court adjourned till Tuesday.

The Countess Tarnovsky's bearing throughout the case has been remarkable. She has sat through a tempest of terrific accusations for over a week with an impassibility rarely broken. Once when her aged and broken father entered the court tears came to her eyes, and once when Prilukoff, in the course of his startling story of his infatuation for her, told how she was accustomed to taking large quantities of cocaine, she was overcome with faintness.

Otherwise her deportment has been invariably correct, dignified, even majestic, in its cold composure. Whether this is the outgrowth of that diabolical perfidy and utter lack of moral feeling which the prosecution attributes to her or whether it is the natural outcome of a sense of deep injustice done her is as yet impossible to decide with certainty. Damning as is some of the testimony advanced against her, there are features of the case which demand a suspension of judgment till the whole truth is known. As yet Countess Tarnovsky is as inscrutable as the sphinx.

The magazine section of THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday contained a comprehensive story of the crime with which the Countess Tarnovsky is charged and the tragic events of her life.

Create Your Own Music

Music, like all other arts, takes on an added charm, the closer and more intimate your association with it becomes.

When you listen to the playing of others, it is like walking through an art gallery and admiring the paintings which may be very fine but in which you have no direct personal interest. But when you play yourself, it is as though you had removed the great masterpieces to your own home and made them your very own possession.

The Pianola Piano Music's Open Door

The PIANOLA Piano owes its rapid growth of popularity to two facts:

First, it satisfies the craving for music that is inherent in human nature.

Second, it provides the fascination of personally producing the music.

When you play the PIANOLA Piano, you enjoy not only the melody and harmony but the even greater charm of putting into the performance your own individuality and taste.

Yours is the touch that creates the strains, yours the zest of the melody.

The PIANOLA Piano has better aids for expression and is more responsive to the performer's slightest wish than any of its imitators. That is why it is so much more artistic and why a performance on it is so much more interesting to a person of musical taste.

Vitally important improvements such as the METROSTYLE, THEMODIST, etc., are exclusive with the PIANOLA Piano. Over 300 patents prevent the copying of the features that have made the PIANOLA and PIANOLA Piano recognized as the "Standard" instruments of the kind throughout the world.

THE STEINWAY PIANOLA PIANO

Messrs. Steinway & Sons, in selecting the PIANOLA as the only Player to be incorporated with their pianos, confirm the opinion of the musical world as to its absolute superiority. CORONER FORBIDS BUILDER'S FUNERAL

Holzhausen, on Telephone Tip, Orders Brannan, Son-in-Law of Grant, Arrested.

TOLD DEATH WAS SUSPICIOUS

Family of Washington Heights Builder Tell the Police That a Man with a Grudge Is Trying to Injure Them.

Acting on information he received from an anonymous source over the telephone on Saturday night that Andrew Grant, a prosperous Washington Heights builder, had been murdered and that the crime was to be covered up by having the body cremated, Coroner Holzhauser, after an investigation last night, ordered the arrest of Grant's son-in-law, John Brannan, and he was locked up in the West 152d Street Police Station. The dead man's former partner, William Gun of 1,253 St. Nicholas Avenue; Dr. A. F. Malabre of 603 West 184th Street, who granted the death certificate, and the undertaker who embalmed the body, were also summoned at the Coroner's orders to the West 152d Street Station and put through a severe cross-examination by the police. The Coroner said later that he had received enough information to warrant him in believing that it a crime had not been committed, at least a lot of circumstances needed explaining.

Mr. Grant, who was 68 years old, had been in the building business in the Washington Heights section for many years. He lived with his family in a five-story apartment house at 569 West 185th Street. He died last Friday morning at 5 o'clock, and arrangements were made at once to have the body cremated. John Brannan, his son-in-law, who is a fish dealer, lived in the same apartments. Grant had been in partnership in many business deals with Gun, and the two, it is said, had had disagreements.

Late Saturday night some one called up Coroner Holzhauser on the telephone. The man on the wire refused to give his name.

"You had better investigate the death of Andrew Grant," said the voice.

"What's the matter?" inquired the Coroner.

"Well, there's something very suspicious about it," said the Coroner's informant. "Mr. Grant was wealthy and carried a large amount of life insurance. He died on Friday, he was embalmed on Saturday, and arrangements have been made to have the body cremated on Sunday."

The man at the other end of the wire rang off and the Coroner began to investigate. He called up Lieut. McCann of the West 152d Street Police Station and asked to have a detective assigned to the case. McCann assigned Detective Charles Terhune.

When the detective communicated the result of his investigation yesterday afternoon the Coroner again called up the West 152d Street Station and ordered Lieut. Thompson, who was on the desk, to arrest Brannan and to order policemen to go to the Grant home and stop all preparations for the funeral; to take charge of the body, and to hold it in readiness to be sent to the Morgue for an autopsy. Policeman Murphy was sent to the house to carry out these instructions while Terhune arrested Brannan. When the son-in-law was arraigned in the police station he was charged with being a material witness.

"I have nothing to fear," said Brannan, who did not appear to be excited. "I think it was my father-in-law's former partner, Gun, who sent that message to the Coroner. I cannot imagine what his purpose was except that he had ill feeling against me and my wife. Gun was present at the embalming of my father-in-law's body, and could easily have stopped the proceedings had he so desired.

"I wasn't aware that my father-in-law had any money or left any life insurance. Gun always had access to Mr. Grant's books, and I have heard him declare on several occasions that my father-in-law was not wealthy. He has some motive behind all this, but I can't imagine what it is. I am perfectly satisfied to have a full investigation. I would have ordered it myself if I had dreamed that anything was wrong. Mr. Grant died a natural death, while being attended by a physician, and the physician gave a proper death certificate. It was Mr. Grant's wish that his body be cremated and in embalming it we were simply carrying out his last wishes. Investigation will show, I think, that everything was perfectly proper."

It was 7:30 o'clock last night when Brannan was taken to the station house. He had scarcely been locked up when Dr. Malabre and Contractor Gun were also brought in. Coroner Holzhauser was waiting, and as soon as they arrived they were taken to the Captain's room where, behind locked doors, the Coroner held an investigation which lasted until after midnight. When it was learned that the dead man had a son named Robert Grant, living at 647 Rae Avenue, the Bronx, he also was sent for.

Grant's wife died about a year ago. According to the son-in-law's wife, Georgiana, her father at one time was worth some $100,000. He had lost nearly all of it, she said, in the last ten years. Only ten days ago she said he lost his last piece of property when a mortgage was foreclosed on a lot at 110th Street and Manhattan Avenue. Worry over this loss, she said, seemed to hasten his death.

For the last ten years she said her father had been a drinking man and Dr. Malabre had attended him for kidney trouble. It was of this complaint, she said, that he died. According to Mrs. Brannan there had never been any trouble between her father and her husband. She thought that the present trouble arose over the fact that the members of the family wanted the body cremated. She showed a will which her father made on Feb. 28, 1901, and in which he expressed a desire to have a simple funeral and to have his body cremated. According to this will, Mrs. Brannan said the household effects were to go to her.

"This whole trouble," declared Mrs. Brannan, "was caused by certain parties because we decided to have my father's body cremated. It was his dying wish that this should be done. The only insurance my father carried was for $6,000, $1,000 of which was in the Massachusetts Mutual Life. It expired on July 4, 1904, and was paid to my sister Mary, who lives with us.

"There was also a five-thousand-dollar policy in the Equitable Life Assurance Society. My father borrowed $335 on this policy on Oct. 23, 1909. It was made out in favor of me and my brother Robert. There is absolutely no justification for my husband being locked up. Everything will be explained in the right time."

The Grants moved to their present apartments about a year ago. Before that they lived in West 184th Street.

Coroner Holzhauser wound up the hearing about 1 o'clock. After releasing the witnesses the Coroner explained to reporters that he was holding Grant's son-in-law, John Brown, because he, Holzhauser, thought a crime might have been committed because Brown lived with Grant, and if a crime had been committed Brown had an opportunity to commit it, and he, the Coroner, had heard that there had been "bad blood" between them.

Then the Coroner went away to think over the developments.

CUTS MEDICAL COURSE.

Cornell Also Will Add Mechanics and Hydraulics to Engineering Instruction.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 13.—Hereafter only one year's instruction in medicine will be given at Cornell University, according to a decision of the university Trustees. Since the medical department was established the curriculum has covered two years' work, the course being completed at the New York Medical College; but since the school was made a graduate institution the number of students in Ithaca has decreased.

The Trustees also decided to establish a department of mechanics and hydraulics in the college of mechanical engineering. Hitherto these courses have been carried on separately in the department of civil engineering.

Dr. G. H. Sabine of Leland Stanford University has been appointed assistant professor of philosophy for a year.

OPPOSES ROCKEFELLER FUND.

W. E. Huntington Says Enough Channels Are Already Open for His Riches.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 13.—President W. E. Huntington of Boston University prepared the following at the request of a Sunday newspaper:

"Great aggregations of wealth under private control are not desirable. However philanthropic and wise the Trustees might be of a fund such as the foundation proposed by Mr. Rockefeller, a vast monopoly of financial power would not seem to be the best thing to be permanently established.

"There are enough institutional channels already in active operation to make use of this man's riches, colossal as they are. Religion, education, charity, reform, are all great and commanding interests that are looked upon by good men everywhere as deserving of financial aid in carrying out the beneficient purposes that each embodies.

"Religion never appealed more beseechingly to wealth than it does to-day for its work in home and foreign missions.

"Education all over the country, in all grades of its work from top to bottom, is crying out for more means.

"The poor, in the cities especially, should be wisely assisted, not by doles of cold charity, but in the large way of comfortable yet cheap housing, thorough sanitary appliances, hospitals, playgrounds, and other provisions that make for health and self-respect.

"Reforming agencies are already in the field of social life. They can be made more and more effective.

"Peace, temperance, charity, the family, are causes which now have organized an efficient machinery for promoting their several high interests for the welfare of the people.

"These all need money, but a prompt and wise distribution of the Rockefeller wealth among well-established institutions would seem to be a better bequest to the country at large than to form a mammoth trust, controlled by a very few men."

ROCKEFELLER GIVES $50,000.

It Is for a Georgia Technical School's Y. M. C. A. Building.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 13.—Announcement was made to-day that John D. Rockefeller had given $50,000 to the Georgia State School of Technology for the purpose of erecting a Young Men's Christian Association building on the campus.

The gift is conditional upon the raising of an additional $25,000 by the friends of the institution. It is believed that this will be done within a short time.

The gift followed a personal visit of President Matheson to Mr. Rockefeller in Augusta, at which time the needs of the Georgia institution were thoroughly discussed. Mr. Rockefeller showed much interest in the college's plans for the building.

WIDOWERS' CLUB FOUNDED.

Number 57 Among Greenwich Organizations, and Supposed to be Protective.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 13.—Greenwich, which boasts that it has a larger number of clubs per capita, as well as greater wealth per capita, than any other town in Connecticut, having up to the last week fifty-six different organizations, has just added one more. The new club, whose organization follows on the heels of that of the Greenwich Equal Franchise League, is known as the Widowers' Social Club.

The founder is Arthur H. Dorland, who was last year Democratic candidate for Representative in the State Legislature. The membership is composed entirely of widowers. One of the by-laws provides that any member who remarries shall provide a first-class dinner for all the other members.

Greenwich is prominently a "marrying" town, many people coming over from New York merely to be married. The spinsters here are noted for energy, activity, and perseverance. Some have suggested, therefore, that the club was organized for the protection, rather than for the mere comfort and entertainment, of the members. Mr. Dorland, the founder, has a fine, sympathetic baritone voice, and writes poetry.

CONSCIENCE-STRICKEN.

Leichner Surrenders to Police, Saying He's a Forger.

Leonard Leichner of 127 Troutman Street, Brooklyn, walked into Brooklyn Police Headquarters in State Street last night and told Lieut. Lindsay, in charge of the Detective Bureau, that he wanted to be locked up because, he said, he had forged a check. He said he was conscience-stricken and could not stand the remorse any longer.

The check, Leichner said, was made out to his order for $18 on the People's Bank in Brooklyn, and was drawn against the account of Frederick Reyn, a tinsmith of 11 Ditmars Street, Brooklyn. Leichner said he forged Reyn's name to the check. He then had it cashed in a saloon in Myrtle Avenue.

Detectives investigated Leichner's story and found it to be as he had stated it. Leichner accordingly was charged with forgery and locked up in the Adams Street police station. He will be arraigned in the Adams Street Police Court to-day, when, it was said, Mr. Reyn will appear against him.

JUSTIFIES UNION METHODS.

John Mitchell Says Mine Workers Will Fight for Right to Unionize.

John Mitchell, former President of the United Mine Workers of America, would appeal from the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court in the matter of the permanent injunction granted to the Hitchman Coal and Coke Company of West Virginia. Mr. Mitchell was shown a copy of a telegram from Richmond stating that the Court of Appeals had made permanent a temporary injunction restraining union labor men from interfering with the Hitchman company's employes for the purpose of unionizing them, the injunction prohibiting every kind of picketing and the using of persuasive as well as threatening language.

"That certainly is the most far-reaching decision yet handed down against labor," said Mr. Mitchell after reading the dispatch. "It is an old case, and the temporary injunction formerly ran against me when I was the President. Now I see it is made permanent personally against President Lewis, my successor. When the trouble occurred there the men were only starting to unionize. There wasn't any strike on, but they took out this remarkable injunction. We hold that the right of man to speak peaceably to his fellow man is fundamental, and that the law does not contemplate destroying that right.

"Decisions like this are provoking, of course, and throw some light on the things which make it difficult for labor union men to seem always conservative and calm, and conciliatory in their actions. When they took out that injunction they even prohibited labor union men from associating in any way they could with the others. It attacks the right to peaceful picketing, and that right we believe is well established in law. The appeal will be taken especially to demonstrate this point."

FIREMEN PUT STRIKE UP TO THE RAILWAYS

ROADS STILL STAND PAT

Say Two Points Involve Discipline—Issue Statement Professing Confidence That Break Will Be Avoided.

CHICAGO, March 13.—The threatened walkout of 25,000 firemen on practically all the railroad systems between Chicago and the Pacific Coast reached a critical stage to-day, when W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, formally notified the railroads that if the entire controversy was not submited to arbitration a strike would be inevitable.

Mr. Carter's letter of notification was indorsed by the brotherhood's committee which represents the firemen on about forty-seven railroads west, northwest, and southwest of Chicago. The letter was sent to W. C. Nixon, General Manager of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, Chairman of the Railroad General Managers' Committee, and reads:

"Dear Sir: Your letter of this date, (March 13,) wherein you state that the Managers' Committee declines to further consider matters in controversy, has been received, and in reply our committee instructs me to say:

"If there is to be a great railway strike the responsibility must and will rest upon the Managers' Committee. That there may be no misunderstanding concerning this responsibility our committee hereby proposes the submission of all matters in dispute to an adjustment by arbitration.

"The public has been informed through the press that matters in controversy cannot be arbitrated, because they involve the authority of railway officials and the discipline of employes. This statement our committee emphatically denies.

"The officials of many railways represented by the Managers' Committee do not hesitate to confess the gross injustice perpetrated under present practices.

"Our committee directs me to request the Managers' Committee through you, if this proposition to arbitrate is not accepted by the Managers' Committee, that you notify us at your earliest convenience."

The railroads had previously announced their willingness to arbitrate the increased wage demand, which the firemen say would amount to about 12½ per cent., while the roads allege that it would be 22½ per cent. The other demands involved, which the Managers' Committee declares concern discipline and authority and are therefore not open to arbitration, have to do with the promotion of firemen and the questions whether, when firemen become enginemen, they are still under the jurisdiction of the brotherhood.

"Does your letter mean that if a satisfactory reply is not received a strike will be called?" Mr. Carter was asked.

"It looks pretty grave," he said. "We are nearer a disagreement than we have ever been during the whole six weeks of conferences. We do not want a strike. We want the public to understand that. As to our authority to strike, we have the vote of more than 80 per cent. of the men in favor of it. All of the answers we have received from the managers heretofore have been evasive. I hope their next reply will not be so."

It was learned that the managers had agreed to stand "pat," and while refusing to make any concessions probably would invite the brotherhood's committee to another conference to-morrow. After conferring with Mr. Nixon, O. L. Dickson, assistant to the President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Road, gave out the following statement:

"We have received Mr. Carter's letter, which to the layman who is not thoroughly familiar with the methods of labor organizations would appear to be somewhat serious and to point to a strike. I wish to say that this is merely one of the methods unfortunately involved in conducting such negotiations, and it is not likely that the men would sanction the action of their leaders in calling a strike over one or two technical points. We do not feel the slightest apprehension over the difficulty. The managers in due time, probably to-morrow, will make definite answer to the firemen's committee, and we hope for a peaceful adjustment."

ROADS HINT HIGHER RATES.

Raising Men's Wages by Arbitration Award Likely to Mean That.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Reports of the possibility of a conflict between railroads west of Chicago and their enginemen and firemen attracted more attention here to-day because for several days there have been indications of an approaching controversy of similar character, affecting the same classes of labor on the railroads east of the Mississippi Valley.

Representatives of these railroads have been in Washington during the past week prepared to apply to Chairman Knapp of the Inter-State Commerce Commission and Labor Commissioner Charles P. Neill, the Federal mediators under the Erdman act, for the exercise of their good offices to avert trouble between the roads and their firemen and engineers. Important officials of the labor organizations also have been in Washington, but they have not thus far disclosed themselves to the mediators.

The principal question involved is that of wages. Indications seem to be that while the projected negotiations will lead to concessions, the railroads will make such concessions only under pressure of formal arbitration and will then put forward the added expense as the basis of a demand for higher freight and passenger rates.

It is probable that within a few days the dispute will be submitted in a formal way to Chairman Knapp and Dr. Neill with a request that they undertake the adjustment of the controversy. It is conceded that if this is done it will prove to be one of the most important controversies the Federal mediators have yet had to consider.

It is said in well-informed quarters here that the railroads have determined informally to insist hereafter upon arbitration of all wages controversies unless they can obtain settlement of pending disputes without serious sacrifice. In the case of the trainmen and conductors of the Baltimore & Ohio system, adjustment of which was announced yesterday, the settlement appears to have been satisfactory to both parties, and was accomplished by the mediators without resort to arbitration.

The pending controversy of the Eastern railroads with the firemen and enginemen is the more serious because it brings to the front, first, the reported determination of the corporations to insist upon arbitration of all wage disputes; second, the probability that any material advance of wages will be followed by a demand for "revision upward" of existing freight and passenger tariffs.

The railroad men here will not talk for publication, but privately they argue that under the present tariffs they are unable, in justice to their stockholders, to increase wages generally. At the same time they contend that it would be unfair to increase the wages of certain classes of employes and not of all, regardless of union affiliations. They profess themselves to be not unwilling to increase wages, but they intimate rather pointedly that if, under the pressure of arbitrators' awards, they are compelled to make a general increase of wages, "the public will have to pay the freight."

The coming week will probably see the issue squarely joined, and the first stage of it is expected to be the application for the intervention of the Federal mediators.

PAPER MILL STRIKERS QUIET.

CORINTH, N. Y., March 13.—The withdrawal last night of Company F of the State Militia from the mills of the International Paper Company here, which have been under military guard since Wednesday, did not result in any disorder to-day among the employes of the company, who are out on strike.

Companies E of Schenectady and L of Saratoga, which are still at the plant, spent a quiet Sunday, and no trouble is expected to-morrow, when 200 additional strikebreakers will arrive from Saratoga.

Within the next twenty-four hours an attempt will be made to operate the mills here with the non-union men who are now housed in the mills to the number of 200 or 300. The strikebreakers are not permitted to leave the mills, but sleep and receive their meals within the plant.

TO CUT OFF FOOD FROM PHILADELPHIA

later the windows of a number of street cars were broken before the reserves got the crowd under control.

Aside from this outbreak cars were run without molestation, and there were more cars in operation than on any Sunday since the strike began. The police and company officials agreed in the statement that the situation was improving hourly.

"We are getting the fares, too," declared an official. "Where two weeks ago 300,000 fares were collected in one day, yesterday 750,000 fares were turned in. This is, of course, accounted for in part by the fact that we are running more cars and people are using them more freely."

The company offers to take strikers back, and does not demand that they shall drop their union membership, but it is insisted that the union shall cut no figure in any peace negotiations. In other words, they are for the "open shop" plan. It is not believed that any effort to secure outside intervention or the mediation of the Civic Federation, Gov. Stuart, or anybody else will bear fruit.

The company officials are silent regarding yesterday's action of the Inter-State Railways Company in increasing to 23 cents an hour the wages of motormen and conductors in Trenton, Reading, Wilmington, Chester, Lebanon, and Norristown, 2,000 in all. The Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company at present pays 22 cents an hour, with a promise of an increase to 23 cents on July 1 to men employed more than one year.

The trolley strike so far has cost the rapid transit company $1,150,000. This sum, according to information which is semi-official, includes loss of fares, destructon and damage of property, and all extraordinary expenditures. The loss in receipts alone has been $30,000 a day, which for 23 days amounts to $690,000. Damages to the company's property totals $10,000. Three cars were virtually wrecked. Their cost was about $8,000. The balance, about $2,000, covers the cost of 5,750 panes of glass broken by those who attacked cars.

Policemen to the number of 6,000 have been fed by the management, and this has entailed an expenditure of about $1,350. The new men, employed, about $2,200, have been paid in wages about $100,000. Their pay ranged from $2.50 to $3 a day, it is stated. Six hundred strikers have returned to the company's service. To this is to be added the cost of salaries paid to the Pinkerton Detective Agency for the services of 480 men who are guarding the elevated and subway. No definite amount is available for this item of cost.

The company expects to recover from the city the amount of damages sustained through the action of rioters. City Solicitor Gendell's recently published opinion that the city is liable is the basis for the officials' belief that recovery is a matter of course.

PRATT BUTTONS NOW ON SALE.

Sympathizers with Philadelphia Strikers May Have Them for 5 Cents Each.

The unions in this city visited by the committee of the Philadelphia strikers which came here last week to raise money for the cause by hiring Italian organ grinders to furnish street music while accompanying members of the committee make collections, reported yesterday that a new plan to raise money has been put into effect, which will net as much as the organ grinding. This is selling buttons bearing the likeness of Strike Leader Pratt. It was stated that they have already sold thousands of these buttons at 5 cents each.

Complaints have been made meantime that certain freelance Italian organ grinders were reaping a harvest by representing that they were playing for the strikers, when they were not.

A committee representing 20,000 Jewish workers in different trades, who struck in Philadelphia in sympathy along with the others, came to this city yesterday to collect money for the Jewish strikers. They went to the headquarters of the United Hebrew Trades, where they received credentials entitling them to solicit contributions from the affiliated unions.

TRAINMEN RENEW DEMANDS.

The New York Central trainmen and conductors began yesterday to prepare for a renewal of the negotiations with the officials of the railroad through Grand Masters Lee and Garretson of the unions. Meetings of lodges of the trainmen on this system were held between here and Buffalo.

A settlement having been reached with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, it is believed that the procedure will be speedier in the case of the other roads, and the fact that, although not gaining all they wanted, the Baltimore & Ohio men obtained an increase in wages inspired the others with hope that they will gain concessions without a strike.

The programme at present is for the Grand Masters to try to effect a settlement with the New Haven and Boston & Maine Railroads before they take up negotiations with the New York Central.

ROOSEVELT BARS POLITICAL WELCOME

REACHES KHARTOUM TO-DAY

Exciting Race by Newspaper Correspondents to See Him on the Nile and Send First News.

By JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN,
Former Assistant Secretary of State.
Correspondent of The New York Times and Chicago Tribune.

Copyright, 1910, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

KHARTOUM, March 13.—Col. Roosevelt is deeply touched by the many evidences he is receiving of the continued interest the American people have in him, and especially because he realizes that he is now a private citizen. He is anticipating with interest the trip through Egypt and Europe, and more eagerly his arrival home, where he will be among the people he knows and who understand him.

Suggestions that the demonstration upon his arrival in New York be participated in by persons of all sections is a matter of gratification, for he has no desire that in any way it may have a political character. Indeed, probably, any such complexion would prove excessively annoying, and he might refuse to attend if he learned of this intention in advance. If a reception takes place, consequently, it must be non-partisan and have no relation to politics. This is in accordance with the attitude he has had from the time of his retirement.

Wife and Daughter Arrive To-Day.

Col. Roosevelt arrives at Khartoum to-morrow afternoon, meeting his wife and daughter at the station at 5:30 o'clock, and proceeding to the Grand Hotel, where they will stop till Thursday. Then they will take a train to Cairo, stopping for an hour at Assouan to inspect the great dam, and at Luxor. For two days the Egyptian Government has placed a special car on the regular train at his disposal.

Your correspondent's special boat Pasha arrived at Khartoum to-night, finding the city on tiptoe with excitement over what is considered the greatest journalistic event that ever occurred in Africa, namely, the race up the White Nile between the Pasha and the Cairo, the latter chartered by journalistic rivals. Although the latter had seven hours' start from Khartoum in consequence of an earlier arrival in Egypt, your correspondent beat them to the telegraph station, after seeing Col. Roosevelt, to file a dispatch.

The Cairo is the fastest ship on the Upper Nile, with a speed at least four miles greater than the Pasha. But the Cairo lost through overconfidence and time wasted unnecessarily by tying up nights and other delays. The Pasha burned her fuel to the last stick and plugged away every minute, navigating the difficult shifting channel, despite the known dangers of night travel.

Cordial Reception by Roosevelt.

Both boats picked up the Dal at breakfast. After a cordial reception by Col. Roosevelt the steamers proceeded to Renk, where messages were filed, your correspondent's being the first on the wire.

The race from the beginning to the end was filled with stirring incidents, the Pasha passing the Cairo at Dueim, 100 miles above Khartoum, and being passed by the Cairo while taking wood above Rabak, seventy-five miles up. The Pasha is an old boat and steamed with broken paddles and pounding engines, but the steam gauge showed the top notch, suggesting the old days on the Ohio River when a negro boy held down the safety valve.

Six blacks sweated in a tropical sun stoking the furnace, while sparks streamed through the funnel and the timbers creaked continually above the hissing steam. On several occasions the boat ran aground. The strategic point was naturally the telegraph station, which is located in Renk, with no other within 100 miles in either direction, and with a single wire with a Soudanese operator with only a casual knowledge of English.

Upon landing the correspondents dashed to the telegraph office, which your correspondent reached first.

KHARTOUM AWAITS ROOSEVELT.

American Flags Displayed in Honor of His Coming To-day.

KHARTOUM, March 13.—Khartoum is now in a gala attire awaiting the coming of Theodore Roosevelt, who, with the other members of the American hunting and scientific expedition, is aboard the steamer Dal, on the last leg of the journey to this city. The steamer is expected to arrive here to-morrow afternoon, but an unusually strong northern gale is blowing, which is kicking up heavy waves in the river, and it is possible that its arrival will be somewhat delayed.

Khartoum society and great crowds of visitors, who have taken apartments at the hotels, are anxiously waiting to accord the former President of the United States a fitting welcome. Many of the streets of Khartoum have been decorated, and the American flag is to be seen on various buildings.

The official arrangements for Col. Roosevelt's reception have been announced. Capt. Clayton of the staff of the Sirdar and Major Gen. Sir Francis Wingate will proceed down the harbor in a launch to meet the steamer Dal. If Col. Roosevelt arrives at the scheduled hour, 4 o'clock in the afternoon, he will go first to the Sirdar's palace and then to the railway station to meet Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel, who are now on their way from Alexandria, and who are due to reach here at 5 o'clock in the evening.

Apartments are in readiness for Col. Roosevelt and his family at the palace, and they will dine there in the evening alone.

To Visit Gordon College.

Tuesday will be devoted to sightseeing around Khartoum, and visits will be paid to the Gordon Memorial College and other institutions. In the evening the heads of the governmental departments and their wives will meet the Americans at a dinner at the Palace. The guests will include Slatin Pasha, the writer, who has so vividly described the massacres in the Soudan.

On Wednesday morning Col. Roosevelt will visit Omdurman. The hills of Kerreri, seven miles from Omdurman, mark the site of the great battle of Omdurman on Sept. 2, 1898, when the Khalifa's army was annihilated and the rule of the Khalifa was brought to an end. He will inspect the Khalifa's house and meet the local celebrities. A polo game has been arranged for the afternoon at the gymkhana grounds, and after that Col. Roosevelt will visit the American Mission. In the evening he will be the guest of the Khartoum Club at a dinner, at which covers will be laid for sixty.

Thursday is a free day, but it is probable that the ex-President will attend the Masonic lodge before his departure and witness the Soudanese drill. Col. Roosevelt and his family will leave here by special train on Thursday night to visit Assouan, Luxor, and Edfu, on the way to Cairo.

Roosevelt's Health Remarkable.

Truly remarkable has been the health enjoyed by Col. Roosevelt and his son during their arduous trip. They are practically the only members of the expedition, among the whites at least, who escaped sickness. Slight attacks, such as most of the party experienced, were only natural, in view of the hardships endured, the heat of the tropics, the noisome places through which the expedition was compelled to pass at times, and the deadly insects which at night make life a burden, unless one is well protected against their assaults. The Sesse Islands, through which the steamer threaded on the trip to Entebbe, are a monument to the devastation wrought by the tsetse fly, for, once well populated, they are now devoid of human life through the sleeping sickness scourge.

Throughout the months of hunting, Col. Roosevelt displayed the greatest concern in the care of the party and the native attendants. His personal interest was shown when one of the correspondents who has been within touch of the expedition from the very beginning was compelled to drop behind on one of the long marches between points. He was finally brought up by porters, who carried him many miles in a hammock, and after that dragged him many more miles in a rickshaw.

Col. Roosevelt immediately insisted that Dr. Mearns take the case in hand, and when the doctor decided that an operation was necessary, the former President volunteered to assist. This was not necessary, but the Colonel stood by and watched the surgeon work.

Pleased by Native Guards.

Nothing has pleased the ex-President more than the native guards of honor which turned out at every conceivable place to greet his coming. At one of the stations in Uganda a native contingent with two bands, one a fife and drum corps and the other composed of brasses, marched to a private house where Mr. Roosevelt was a guest at luncheon and drew up for review. Each of the bands was conducted by a mission priest, and they enthusiastically rendered the American National anthem, with only a false note here and there.

The manner in which the training of the natives is carried out interested Col. Roosevelt greatly. Among other curious things he saw uneducated natives taking and sending messages in Morse code by semaphore, flags, lamp, and heliograph. Although these signal men do not know what the messages mean they never make a mistake in sending or receiving. Their method of checking is by counting the letters in a group. The natives display a curious instinct in following their instructions to the letter.

The ex-President made the most of everything, enjoying the success of the expedition as keenly as the others and sharing as fully as any in its burdens.

WANT ROOSEVELT MEDAL BACK

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 13.—When former President Roosevelt gets back to the United States he will probably be asked to return for correction a medal which was presented to him at the Jamestown Exposition. Although the medal purports to have been presented by the State of Georgia, the State refused to pay for it along with many other bills incurred by W. Norwood Mitchell, Georgia Commissioner at the exposition. These were paid by Mitchell and his friends, who have thus been practically ruined. Mitchell recently filed a petition in bankruptcy.

Mitchell and his friends intend to put the facts before Col. Roosevelt and ask him to return the medal so that the name of Gov. Terrell and the State may be erased and the names of those who paid for the medal may be incribed. It will then be returned to Col. Roosevelt as a token of esteem from individual Georgians.

NEW AIRSHIP BUILT OF IRON.

German Inventor Expects It to Carry at Least Fifty Persons.

TRIER, Germany, March 13.—An immense air cruiser to carry from fifty to sixty persons, and intended to travel at from forty-four to fifty miles an hour, is approaching completion here, and will be launched early this Spring by its inventor, Anton Border, an engineer of this city. It introduces an entirely new departure in the construction of airships, as it is built of iron.

The new vessel is expected to achieve even more successful results than those of the rigid aluminum type built by Count Zeppelin, on which it is chiefly modeled. It is to be named the Trier, after the town where it was built.

The skeleton of the airship is formed of rolled iron piping. The central hollow iron shaft is 410 feet in length and about 16 inches in diameter. There are sixteen other side shafts in the framework, each of them about 328 feet long and 8 inches in diameter. These are joined to the central shaft by a latticework of iron.

The gas is contained in twelve ring balloonets, in the same manner as in the Zeppelin craft. These balloonets are just over 27 feet long by nearly 40 feet in diameter, and they lie end to end along the body of the airship. The vessel is provided with no fewer than five motors, developing altogether 480 horse power. One of them, of eighty horse power, drives the propeller, which is fitted at the bows. The other four develop 100 horse power each, and are utilized to put into movement the sixteen vertical and eight horizontal screw planes which steer the ship upward and downward and to starboard and port. They also control the motion of the ship forward and astern.

It is estimated that these powerful motors will give the vessel a speed of at least forty-four miles an hour when they are all working, and it is even thought that an average of fifty miles an hour will be attained.

The entire weight of the framework, motors, and equipment is thirty tons, and the enormous volume of gas contained in the vessel when fully inflated will permit the transportation of ten tons of freight or fifty to sixty persons.

LINER AGROUND IN NO DANGER.

Other Accommodations Arranged for Passengers on the United States.

CHRISTIANIA, March 13.—The Scandinavian-American Line steamer United States, from Copenhagen March 10 for New York, is still aground off this port, but is not believed to be in any danger. The Captain of the United States said to-day:

"We grounded exactly at 11 o'clock in a dense fog. Both myself and a pilot were on the bridge. There was no panic. The life-boats were cleared and put in readiness, but it was soon seen that there was no danger to be feared. On examination we found a large hole under the water line, and the pumps were kept at work.

"When the fog cleared five steamers arrived and took off all the passengers, transferring them to Christiania. A liner has been ordered from Copenhagen to take the third-class passengers to New York. The first and second cabin passengers will be sent to British ports to re-embark."

Flood Benefit Realizes $50,000.

PARIS, March 13.—President Fallières, Premier Briand, and other members of the Cabinet attended a brilliant gala race meeting at the Auteuil track to-day, in aid of the flood sufferers. More than $50,000 was realized.

RAMSCAR IN A CELL WITH HIS CONCERTINA

PRISON NOT NEW TO HIM

Frequently Arrested for Teaching Children to Beg for His "Homes"—Matron His Accuser Now.

William H. Ramscar, who has for nearly sixty years advertised himself as "inventor and worker in God's field of charity," and who has been in jail several times in connection with his work in the said field, is again in trouble and in jail. When he was led down to the Ludlow Street Jal last Friday to spend fifteen days, he took with him a supply of clean shirts, a roll of music, and his concertina, which always appears in his photographs.

Yesterday he sat in his "room" in the jail playing "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me," and looking intently at a sheet of music, as if he were not playing by ear.

Ramscar is a tall man, over 70 years old, with snow-white hair and white beard. He keeps his beard neatly trimmed, and was hurt on Friday when the jailer took out of his pocket the small pair of scissors he is wont to use on his beard. He calls himself "the Rev. Mr. Ramscar," and dresses like an Episcopal clergyman. He came to this country from Sheffield, England, about sixty years ago; he has given all his time, when not in jail, to soliciting for one kind of a "home" or another.

He has been at the head of seven different institutions. He first came into prominence in 1882, when he was running a home at Mott Avenue and 165th Street. An investigation then showed that out of fifty-six children taken into his institution sixteen had died within a short time. A Coroner's jury charged him with criminal neglect, and put him under $5,000 bail, but he was later discharged.

Two years later the "home" was again investigated. There were then ninety children in it. It was charged that he sent them into the streets to beg, having a covered wagon to trail along behind them to take in what they got. He was sentenced to thirty days at that time.

Ramscar's Jail Record.

Complaints came in about him to the Charity Organization Society and to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. In 1889 he was sentenced to one year in the pennitentiary on the charge of assaulting John Laverty, an old man, and in 1893 he went to Blackwell's Island again for six months for sending children out to beg.

As fast as one "home" would be knocked to pieces he would come back out of prison and begin begging for money to start another, and yet it has been his practice to charge relatives for keeping the inmates of his home. He would go from house to house and make his pleas. He usually carried with him cards on which was printed his picture and the following words:

> W. H. RAMSCAR,
> Inventor
> and
> Worker in God's Field of Charity.
> Carry light into the dark homes of sorrow; visit the poor and give them bread; go to the dens and dungeons of vice and crime, and speak peace and pardon.

In 1907 it was announced that Gen. Furlong had left $5,000 to the "home" Ramscar then happened to be running. It was for old men. But he never got the money, it was stated yesterday by the matron of his newest "home," because, she said, he had moved and changed the name of his institution. He changed the name, she said, out of his great love for his wife. He named his new place, which is now at 512 East Eighty-ninth Street, the "Margaret Jane Non-Sectarian Home for Aged Indigent People and Incurables from all the States."

In order to perpetuate the name of his wife, the matron said, Ramscar took a chance on forfeiting the $5,000. He lost.

About the time, however, that Gen. Furlong's will was made public, Mrs. Ramscar was getting a divorce. She obtained the custody of the children and went to Cornwall-on-the-Hudson to make her own living. She complained to the police now and then about Ramscar annoying her. She is now dead, it is said.

His Latest Activities.

Last June Ramscar took a year's lease on the three-story house at 512 East Eighty-ninth Street. He employed as matron Mrs. Mary Russell, agreeing to raise her wages as the number of the inmates increased. He had now restricted his "home" to old men and women. He went out every day seeking money and new inmates. They pay $8.57 a month.

This home now has in it six old women and one aged man, whose name is N. F. Powers. He told yesterday how he happened to be there. He said his son-in-law, who lives in Brooklyn, was approached by "the Rev. Mr. Ramscar" on the street, who asked for contributions and gave him literature telling about the "home." Just at that time, went on Mr. Powers, his son-in-law was looking for a home into which Mr. Powers could go, and thus it was that the younger man had sent him there. He said he was satisfied with his treatment.

The six old women include one Kansas suffragette. She desired to cast her vote yesterday in favor of Ramscar, who, she said, was a grand old man. She is about 70 years old, and can hardly see, but she produced her Kansas certificate, saying that she was a citizen and entitled to vote in all elections.

All the inmates praised Ramscar and belittled Mrs. Mary Russell, whose suit put him in jail. She left the home in January, and had the Legal Aid Society sue the old man for back wages amounting to $50. She got judgment, and since Ramscar would not pay he was put in jail. Mrs. Mattie Cuyler, Mrs. Russell's successor as matron, gave the following evidence yesterday of Ramscar's heroism:

"Now, mind you, he had $25 here in the home on Friday. He could have raised the other $25 and got free, but that would have made some of these old women suffer. What did he do? He left the $25 to help us out and went to jail himself. Don't say that we are hard up; we are not. We have that $25, and next week some more fees will come in."

Civil Service School to Reopen.

The Civil Service School, which the Thirtieth Assembly District Republican Club has been holding at 112 East 125th Street, will open its regular Spring session next Friday evening. Members of the club and their friends both in and out of the district will be prepared for the various Federal, State, and municipal civil service examinations free of charge. This is the school's third season. Many of its pupils have secured civil service positions through it. The instructors are G. Z. Medalie and W. A. Borklund. W. S. M. Silber, J. Silverstone, and S. J. Holzinger are the committee in charge.

Diplomatists to Visit French Fete.

Several diplomatists have promised Jules Jusserand, the French Ambassador, to attend the French Hospital bazaar, which opens in the Metropolitan Opera House on April 5. President Fallières has sent a rare collection of Sevres. Vice President Sherman will open the bazaar. Gov. Hughes will speak on April 6, and Mayor Gaynor on the opening night. Mme. Jusserand, the bazaar's honorary Vice President, has enlisted the services of Mesdames Sherman, Wickersham, Depew, Root, Hughes, and Gaynor.

FEARS FOR PUBLICITY BILL.

Perry Belmont Says Democrats Favor It, Republicans Are Doubtful.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Perry Belmont of New York, President of the National Publicity Law Organization, to-day sent a telegram to Gov. Judson Harmon of Ohio thanking the Governor and other prominent men for their assistance in the fight for publicity of campaign contributions. The House Committee on Elections yesterday reported out the McCall bill, which provides for such publicity. Mr. Belmont's telegram says:

> As representing a non-partisan organization I regret to find it necessary to say to you and other members of our association that the report of the bill has been secured only by the persistent efforts of the minority members of the committee, Representatives Rucker of Missouri, Hardwick of Georgia, Gillespie of Texas, and Conroy of New York, and that the Republican leaders of the house have yet to demonstrate that they do not intend to prevent the enactment of a campaign publicity law as they did in the last Congress.

Representative McCall, Republican, of Massachusetts, who introduced the bill in the House, said: "I believe the Republicans of the House are for the bill and will vote for it when the time comes." Representative Rucker, Democrat, of Missouri, said that the "Democrats would be for it to a man."

TO WELCOME FAIRBANKS.

New York Methodists to Meet Him—R. W. Perks, M. P., Coming Too.

Methodists are making plans to give former Vice President Fairbanks and Mrs. Fairbanks a cordial welcome when they reach here next Friday. With them comes to this country and to Canada Robert W. Perks, M. P., a prominent Methodist layman. It is now expected that Mr. Fairbanks will speak at the Preachers' Meeting in the Methodist Building on Monday morning, March 21. If the party arrives in time, Mrs. Fairbanks is to be guest of honor at a reception by the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which she was formerly President General, at the Hotel Astor on Friday evening.

Mr. Perks is to speak at the Metropolitan Temple, Seventh Avenue, below Fourteenth Street, on Thursday evening, March 24, upon the sbuject of his Methodist Brotherhood. Mr. Perks projected the plan of obtaining 20,000,000 guineas from 20,000,000 Methodists to establish the great Methodist headquarters in London, now building on the site of the old Westminster Aquarium.

Mr. Perks is interested in a great engineering firm, and hopes to get the contract to dig the canal from the lakes to the Ottawa River which Canada expects to construct.

HUGHES'S BILLS TO COME.

Legislature Will Have a Large Programme When Bribery Inquiry Ends.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 13.—It will be April 1 before the Legislature settles down in earnest to the task of lawmaking. At least two weeks more will be consumed by the Senate in its bribery investigation, and until a verdict in the Allds-Conger case is rendered, there can be no serious consideration of legislation.

The character and extent of the legislation of 1910 will depend upon the success of the efforts now being made to reorganize the Republican Party in the State. If Gov. Hughes is to receive the support of the State Committee and the party leaders, there will be little resistance when the Hughes policies are submitted to a vote in the Legislature. The powerful combination against the Governor of last year will not be felt. Senators John Raines, Patrick H. McCarren, and Thomas F. Grady held the reins in 1909, and nearly all of the Governor's recommendations were thrown aside, but Senator Grady is the only one of the triumvirate who remains, and without dictation from outside sources there will be little resisting power in the Senate.

The programme of the session set forth by Gov. Hughes included these items:

> Enactment of a direct nominations bill.
> Acceptance of the gift of Mrs. E. H. Harriman for a State park on the west shore of the Hudson.
> Extension of the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commissions to the telegraph and telephone companies.
> Adoption of a new charter for New York City.
> Extension of the forest preserve.
> Development of the State's water power resources for the benefit of the State.
> Protection of the streams of the State from pollution.
> Reduction in the number of elected State officers.

None of these has yet been put under way toward enactment. It is probable that the Direct Nominations bill, which has been introduced by Senator Hinman and Assemblyman Green, will be vigorously attacked by the Republican organization leaders. Speaker Wadsworth has declared that he will not support such a measure. Other State leaders declare that until the Republican Party in its State Convention goes on record in favor of the plan they will oppose any scheme which means the elimination of the convention.

FLIGHT OF PAULHAN SEEN BY CROWDS

ALMOST WRECKED AT START

Spectators Gasp as Difficult Air Currents Toss Him About Fifty Feet from the Ground.

The calendar and the elements both were very good to Louis Paulhan at the Jamaica race track yesterday. They provided jointly a Sunday with a cloudless sky, temperature unsually balmy for a day so early in March, and wind conditions that for New York were, aeronautically speaking, ideal.

After keeping every one, including Edwin Cleary, his manager, in suspense for several hours as to whether he would or would not fly, Paulhan finally had his Farman biplane trundled out on the track and half an hour later made an ascent that lasted for eight minutes. In that time he covered approximately seven miles, flew at times at the rate of sixty miles an hour, and made turns that fairly caused shivers to run up and down the backs of the witnesses to his flight.

Some 1,500 spectators, most of whom had come to the track in motor cars, which, when packed, made the field look like the roadside of a Vanderbilt Cup race, paid $1 apiece for the privilege of entering the inclosure. Five thousand others who believed that they could see quite as much without the expenditure of that tax—and subsequently found their hypothesis well founded—at last had their ambitions gratified and saw Paulhan do some really remarkable and dangerous stunts.

At ten minutes to 4 the big Farman biplane was rolled out of the betting shed and pushed onto the track. Immediately the spectators, who had been waiting for two hours for something to happen, rushed to the rail and settled themselves for thrills.

Instead, however, of Paulhan entering the driver's seat, he and his wife, Mescarrol, one of his mechanics, and Mme. Mescarrol, and Paulhan's uncle took a very deliberate stroll across the field to the back stretch. There they stood for some time in conversation, while Paulhan and Mescarrol took observations of wind conditions in that vicinity.

This was doubtless necessary, as on Friday Paulhan found the wind currents along the back stretch very peculiar and quite difficult to solve, owing to an isolated clumb of trees and a series of depressions in the field's surface which made the air currents swirl mightily. On Friday these air currents so captured Paulhan's biplane as nearly to upset it, and for a time it looked as if he could not regain or maintain complete control of it.

Finally, however, the biplane was pushed up to the southern end of the track, and at 4:13 Paulhan took his seat. Two minutes later he gave the signal for his mechanics to let go of the throbbing machine, and it started on a fifty-foot run across the frozen turf. Paulhan gave his elevating plane a sharp upward turn and the biplane glided gracefully into the air.

Within ten seconds it was being rocked and tossed and battled to and fro fifty feet from the ground, and the spectators held their breaths in fear that Paulhan might not be able to master the apparently difficult ground currents. He did, however, although it was very manifest that he was having a hard fight of it. He steered straight across the field, constantly increasing his altitude. After getting 200 feet up he swung his machine to the east and kept rising, traveling at this time at the rate of about fifty miles an hour.

Suddenly he swung like a huge albatross directly at right angles to the previous line of flight and soared past the grand stand at a distance of more than a mile and about 400 feet up. He was then flying with the wind and was moving at the rate of nearly sixty miles an hour. Out past the confines of the field he went, across the railroad tracks and special trains, whose engines whistled and tooted shrilly, and northward for about a mile.

At this point of his flight Paulhan made a turn so sharp that the spectators gasped. Its like in daring has never before been seen, probably, on an American aviation field. Quickly he regained an even keel, and then turned westward across the field, and over the heads of the spectators, out past the grand stand, and then made a huge circle at a height of 100 feet.

A sudden turn of the rudder and Paulhan was flying acros sthe roof of the clubhouse and descending with his motor working at full speed. His biplane resembled nothing so much as a huge hawk as, at an angle of fifty degrees, it approached the earth. Then, just as it looked as if it and its driver were going to be dashed to pieces, the motor stopped its thrumming, the forward elevating plant shot up, and the machine skimmed the ground for ten yards, finally coming to a stop within twenty-five feet of the point where it had left earth and just eight minutes to the second later.

Among the spectators were Police Commissioner Baker and his wife, Augustus Post, William J. Hammer, and other prominent people. Wilbur Wright was not at the track. In New York a statement of Cortlandt Field Bishop, President of the Aero Club of America, was shown him. Mr. Bishop had said that until the Wright suits against Paulhan had been decided no European aviators would come to the United States, and that this country was, because of the Wrights' attitude on their patent proposition, unlikely to get the international aviation meet. Mr. Wright said in reply:

"Our attitude in this matter is pretty well known. It is not our intention to prohibit sport or spoil the international meet by restricting it to machines built by The Wright Company. It is just that, in figuring up the cost of a race meet, a reasonable sum should be set aside to compensate the owners for the use of their property. If this is done race meets can be held in this country at which infringing machines of several styles and makes, domestic or foreign, can fly without hindrance."

CUNARD MAIL SHIPS DROP QUEENSTOWN

Hereafter They Will Use Fishguard Only and Connect with Calais Boats.

WILL BEAT GERMAN LINERS

New Schedule Is Expected to Put Passengers There from 18 to 24 Hours Ahead of Cherbourg Ships.

It became known yesterday that the Directors of the Cunard Steamship Company had decided to eliminate Queenstown altogether as a port of call for their eastbound mail steamships. The slower liners Caronia and Carmania, it is understood, will call at Queenstown on both their east and westbound trips in the Summer from April 1 to Nov. 1, when they are taken off the New York-Liverpool service to go on the Mediterranean route.

By the saving of time in dropping Queenstown the Cunard officials hope to land the Continental passengers from the Lusitania and Mauretania in London on Monday in time to connect with the 9 P. M. night mail train via Dover-Calais, which would land them in Paris at 5:50 A. M, on Tuesday. This, the line estimates, will beat the Cherbourg ships from New York to Paris by from eighteen to twenty-four hours.

When there are a sufficient number of through passengers for Paris and the Continent the Great Western Railroad will attach special saloon carriages to the rear end of the London train at Fishguard and slip them at Reading, where one of its fastest engines will be waiting to haul the special through to Dover in time to connect with the 11 P. M. twenty-four-knot turbine steamer which carries the passengers by the 9 P. M. train from London across the Channel to Calais.

In the Winter months, and up till the middle of July, when the Atlantic liners are running on the long route to avoid the icebergs, the Mauretania and Lusitania should arrive in ordinary weather at Fishguard between 2 and 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon. The train will be waiting ready, so that it can be loaded up and started within half an hour of the landing of the passengers at the station pier. With these two liners the boat express runs to London usually in two sections, and the Paris passengers will travel in the first section. On the short route the two big Cunarders will arrive at Fishguard, direct from New York, about 11 A. M. on Monday, which will enable passengers to have their luncheon on the train and dine in London, with plenty of time to connect with the 9 P. M. Continental mail for France.

The Campania or the new twenty-one-knot 25,000-ton liner Franconia, which will run next Winter as relieving ship on the New York-Liverpool service, will arrive in Fishguard on Tuesdays and land passengers in London twenty-four hours later than the Lusitania and Mauretania in fine weather. Since January this year all the Cunarders have omitted Queenstown as a port of call eastbound on an order which expires on April 1. In this period the mails and passengers for Ireland have been landed at Fishguard and sent across to Rosslare by the twenty-four-knot turbine steamships of the Great Western Railroad, and from that point by mail trains to the various towns in the north and south of Ireland.

The Cunard officials are looking forward to the completion of the piers and inner breakwater at Fishguard, so that their ships will be able to go alongside and embark passengers and mails there on Saturday night instead of having to wait five or six hours at Queenstown. It is understood that the mail steamships will call at that port westbound to take on passengers and the Irish mails.

RUNAWAY EXCITES FIFTH AV.

Hits Hansom in Crowded Thoroughfare, Throwing Out Driver and Wife.

A spirited horse driven by Julius W. Kruger of 210 East Twenty-second Street, who was accompanied by his wife, took fright in front of 613 Fifth Avenue yesterday and bolted. The thoroughfare was crowded and cries of "runaway" sent automobiles and other vehicles scurrying to get out of the way.

At Forty-ninth Street the runabout collided with a hansom and was overturned. Mr. and Mrs. Kruger were thrown out. Dr. Hanton took Mr. Kruger to Flower Hospital. He had a dislocated leg. Mrs. Kruger escaped with a few bruises.

TARIFF HITCH WITH CANADA NEARS CRISIS

Experts' Fruitless Mission to Ottawa Creates a Serious Situation for the Administration.

CANADA'S ATTITUDE FIRM

Cessation of Trade with Her Would Prejudice Taft in the Coming Elections, Especially in Border States.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The return to Washington of the special tariff commission from its fruitless visit to Ottawa, in an effort to reach an understanding with the Canadian Government, has confronted the Administration here with one of the gravest problems it has yet met. It is no secret that the commission found the Canadian Government—and to a still greater degree the Canadian people—in an unbending attitude.

The special commission consisted of Consul General Foster at Ottawa, who acted as Chairman; Prof. Emory, Chairman of the Tariff Board of the Treasury Department, and Mr. Pepper, the commercial expert of the Bureau of Trade Relations in the State Department. Prof. Emory and Mr. Pepper reached Washington a few days ago, and yesterday the members of the Tariff Board held a long consultation with the President. The result of the conference is understood to have been indefinite, and another will take place to-morrow.

The commission, it is pointed out, went to Canada handicapped by the terms of the Payne Tariff act, under which the only inducement they could offer Canada for the desired concessions from her was the suspension by Presidential proclamation of the maximum rates. In return for this rather negative proposition the commission went to demand the removal of the Canadian export duties on pulp wood from crown lands, and substantially the low or intermediate tariff rates recently given French imports into Canada in return for similar favors from France.

This proposition struck the Canadian officials as simply amusing. The Laurier Government is willing to head off as much as possible the further imposition of export duties on shipments to the United States in return for favors from this country, but even that amount of friendly feeling on its part has already raised an outcry in Canada. The present export duties apply only to cuttings from the crown lands, and the people, unless their Government exacts good terms from us, will insist that these restrictions be extended to timber cut from private lands also.

The political significance of the diplomatic and commercial crisis this situation develops is apparent at once when the importance and nature of the trade between this country and Canada are considered, and when it is remembered that even without the complications of this particular snarl the tariff question bids fair to count heavily against a Republican majority in the next House. This Government must show its hand by April 1, when, under the statute, the maximum rates will go into effect, unless Canada is exempted by special proclamation of the President. Almost immediately after that date the Congressional campaign begins, and that campaign the Republican leaders are already viewing with alarm.

It is thought here that the practical cessation of trade intercourse between the two countries would at once cause a tremendous uprising against the Taft Administration in all the border cities and in many other sections wherever industries are affected. Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and many other cities are directly and vitally interested in this international exchange, and are already prepared to voice their wishes in no uncertain tone.

The commerce that is at stake in the negotiations now going on amount to an annual $280,000,000; $90,000,000 have the value of Canadian goods sold in the United States; $100,000,000 of American products sent to Canada.

One of the most interesting phases of the pending difficulty is that should the higher rates be imposed, and a tariff war between this country and Canada begin, at least one important group of the losers by such a conflict will be made up of the men and interests who did most to secure the passage of the provisions of the tariff act under which the present situation has arisen.

These men are the papermakers, and their loss will come from the fact that in Canada they have heavy holdings of pulp wood, which, in case of a trade war, they would not be able to use. In the crown lands of the Province of Quebec alone American interests have secured rights to the pulp wood on 12,000 square miles, while these holdings, combined with the improvements that have been already made with a view to getting this pulp wood out for use in the United States, represent an investment not far short of $15,000,000.

The resentment the Canadians feel at American exactions in tariff matters, and the willingness on that ground to head off exports to the United States, has been greatly reinforced lately by the cry for conservation. This cry has been raised by Dr. Fernow—the Canadian Gifford Pinchot—and he has the backing of the newspapers, the manufacturers, and the people in demanding that Canadian forests be used only by Canadians, and that as great restrictions as possible be thrown around the foreign traffic in Canadian wood and wood products.

Apparently there are only three courses open to the Taft Administration, and two of these are pretty much the same thing. One is a flat declaration of war on April 1, with the imposition of our maximum. The next is the postponement of this imposition beyond that date, in the hope of gaining concessions, with the prospect ultimately of having to back down with as good grace as possible. The third is an immediate surrender, with the reopening of negotiations on a basis more reasonable than our present demands.

Back of these alternatives, of course, is the final recourse to a reciprocity treaty. But from the viewpoint of the United States such a thing is almost an impossibility. It involves a repeal of a substantial part of the Payne Tariff act, and that would mean the reopening of the whole tariff question. The tariff question may be reopened, but if it is done at the next Congress it will be started by a Democratic House.

SIMPSON'S AUTO KILLS A BOY.

Machine of Official of Woolen Company Runs Down Young Lane.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., March 13.—George W. Simpson of Main Street, Andover, Assistant Treasurer of the Woolen Company, was arrested to-day by the Cambridge police on the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Timothy Lane, a boy of 10, of 4 Leonard Avenue, Cambridge.

After tow hours' detention Simpson was released on $2,500 bail, furnished by William M. Wood of Back Bay, who is President of the company. Simpson will appear in the Cambridge District Court to-morrow morning.

The boy, in company with his brother Joseph and Jerome Crowley, was returning from Sunday school, when, as they crossed Broadway, Simpson's auto suddenly came in sight. According to the latter's story the boy got in front of the car, and Simpson, to avoid hitting him, turned sharply toward the sidewalk. Simpson says Lane became bewildered and ran directly into the car. He was hit by the fender and dragged under the wheels. Simpson stopped the auto and was surprised at seeing the boy get up and start to run away. He had gone but a few steps, however, when he fell unconscious. At the Cambridge Hospital the physicians could not detect any sign of life, and thought the bay had probably died from a broken neck.

AUTO HITS TWO CHILDREN.

Sister and Brother Knocked Down as They Step from Behind a Street Car.

Just after leaving Central Park yesterday afternoon Elizabeth Flynn, 15 years old, and her five-year-old brother, Edward, were struck by an automobile in Eighth Avenue, near the 100th Street entrance to the park. Their home is at 60 West 100th Street.

The girl's head was bruised and lacerated in several places when she was thrown to the pavement, and it was thought at the time that her left knee cap was fractured.

Edward was also hurled to the street and received contusions of the body and possible internal injuries.

The children were struck by a southbound automobile just after they had passed behind a northbound Eighth Avenue surface car. While several men and women ran to the assistance of the children, Patrolman Wright called an ambulance. Dr. Wardner responded, and removed both children to the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

The chauffeur was taken to the West 100th Street Station, and held on the charge of felonious assault. He said he was Elias T. Terry of 383 St. Nicholas Avenue. He was alone in the auto, which he said was owned by Cooley & West, a Mount Vernon real estate concern.

AUTO LEARNER PLAYS HAVOC.

Breaks Woman's Arm, Crashes Two Plate Glass Fronts, Scatters Crowd.

KINGSTON, March 13.—John H. Santory, manager of a clothing store here, purchased a new automobile yesterday and caused $500 damage while trying to learn how to run it to-day.

He practiced in the business section, and after running down Mrs. Sarah E. Winchell, who was returning from church, and breaking her arm, the machine wrecked the plate glass front of his firm's store, scattered a crowd that ran to Mrs. Winchell's assistance, and finally crashed into the plate glass front of a store on the opposite side of the street.

STREET CAR WRECKS AN AUTO.

Chauffeur the Only One of Six People in It Who Was Hurt.

An automobile containing half a dozen persons, and operated by John A. Wilson of 1,268 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn, was run down yesterday at Rockaway Avenue and Somers Street by a crowded Hamburg Avenue car bound for the Williamsburg Bridge. On the car were half a dozen policemen going home after their tour of duty.

The auto, which belonged to E. A. Pastre of 18 Ocean Parkway, was crossing the car track at a high rate of speed, when it was met broadside and completely smashed. Wilson was severely cut by broken glass, but the others were unhurt.

The passengers in the car got a severe jolt, but nobody was injured.

CITY BREVITIES.

John Mitchell will speak at the third Present Problem dinner to be held on Wednesday, April 6, at the Murray Hill Lyceum, on "Can Labor Unions Secure a Living Wage?" The other speakers will be Dr. Walter E. Weyl, Hugh Frayne, Herman Robinson, and Mrs. Helen Varick Boswell.

A meeting of the Order of the Sons of Italy and the United Italian Benefit Societies, held yesterday at Webster Hall, 119 East Eleventh Street, adopted resolutions protesting against the Hays bills, pending in Congress, for the restriction of immigration. The Independent Order of Free Sons of Israel adopted similar resolutions.

LABOR JOINS CLERGY IN SUNDAY FIGHT

Ministers Are to Work for Eight-Hour Day in Return for Sabbath Observance.

MITCHELL DISAVOWS PIETY

"We Don't Care What Day It Is, but We Must Have One Day of Rest," Says the Labor Leader.

A mixed audience of clerical men and laborers, some of the latter in the uniforms of their trades, gathered in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden yesterday to form a union of religion and labor against industrial plants that operate on Sunday.

The Rev. Frederick Courtney, rector of St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church, who presided, assured the laboring men that the religious leaders present were interested greatly in preventing the further invasion of Sunday by commerce. John Mitchell, Vice President of the Civic Federation, who spoke on behalf of the working men, said that labor was really interested not so much in Sunday closing as in the protection of the eight-hour day against influences working to lengthen it to ten hours, and in some cases to twelve or fourteen.

Mr. Mitchell proposed as a fair bargain that the laboring men help the ministers to gain their point of a day of rest on Sunday, provided the ministers would reciprocate by doing their best for the eight-hour day during the rest of the week. Other speakers thought that the best result from the public conference would be to start a general religious crusade for an "eight-hour day and a closed-Sunday sentiment," leaving the laws to follow the sentiment as it became assertive enough to make demands in politics.

The Day of Rest Conference brought together men of many organizations, among them being the Department of Labor, United Association of Post Office Clerks, the Lord's Day Alliance, the New York Sabbath Committee, the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, the Kings County Sunday Observance Association, the National Federation of Churches, and the Brooklyn Central Labor Union.

Mr. Mitchell told the clergymen that he did not think the laboring men cared a great deal about the sanctity of Sunday, and would be poor followers of a crusade for a rigidly religious Sabbath. He also made it plain that he was no believer in the essential "dignity" of labor.

"It is wrong to say that labor in itself is noble," the former mine worker said. "It isn't noble to work in slavery, nor in serfdom, nor under the padrone system of Mexico. And it is not noble to work in these United States when you have to pay out to-morrow's wage for today's bread.

"But there is one kind of ennobling work. It is that work you do with joy because your muscles are not overfatigued and your body is not exhausted. Most working men and women, Prof. Fisher of Yale has recently told us, are in a continual state of overfatigue. And that is why it is that they seek a stimulus in strong drink and in vicious practices, why their work misshapes them as cilivized beings and as good, desirable citizens.

"Why, when I was a young man working in the mines of New Mexico we worked seven days a week and ten hours a day. And the man that didn't spend a great deal of the time he was not working in a saloon was just a little despised in that mining camp. Now, I am proud to say that with the eight-hour day and the Saturday half holiday and no work on Sunday, the men in almost every mining camp in the country have voted for a dry camp, and the saloon lounger is no longer the typical worker.

"Instead, the family life is thriving better, the work is better done by men not too tired to do it, and the civilization of the working classes is safeguarded infinitely better.

"It is one of those ancient fictions against which we contend to say that the devil finds work for the idle and that therefore the working man ought to be kept at work all the time. The trouble is that folks fail to differentiate between idleness and recreation. When you give a strong man rest he wants to work. His muscles demand work. That idleness which he takes from choice after a period of work is mighty different from that enforced idleness that comes from being unable to get work to do when he is in condition to do it.

"To-day production in this country so outruns the demands that we are building a class of strong men who can get no work. And will anybody have the hardihood to say that with this increasing army of the unemployed we should do anything to lengthen the working hours or the working days of those who are now doing the industrial labor of the country?

"I say we should not, and since we union labor men have guarantees as to hours and days of work a week we have special obligations resting upon us. They are to look out for the hours of our unorganized brothers, for our eight-hour day is always imperiled so long as others work ten hours, and our six-day week is imperiled so long as others work seven. We don't care especially whether our one day of rest comes on Sunday or some other day; we wish it as an economic necessity, not a matter of piety.

"Commerce knows no flag, no rest, no law; commerce is not men; we must not let it invade our lives to the exclusion of our needful rest; if you are our helpers in this fight then we must welcome the opportunity to form this new alliance."

The Rev. Warren M. Wilson of the Persbyterian Church's Labor Department presented some figures on the extent of seven-day employment in New York State.

"The excessively keen competition of industries in this State forces them to exploit the new immigrant, whose needs are also excessively keen," said he.

"I find that the employes work seven days a week in about 10,342 different industrial plants in the State, including 3,826 restaurants, 290 hotels, 1,905 drug stores, 712 floral shops, 523 tobacco stores, 1,600 fruit stands, 2,000 delicatessen stores, 1,376 confectionery shops, 2,500 bakeries, 100 taxicabs and automobile companies, 75 newspaper offices, and 1,037 livery stables.

"To this total we must add 32,000 railroad men, 2,000 employes of electric light plants, 4,000 employes of the telephone companies, and 1,000 employes of department stores that work on Sundays.

"My conclusions are that we ministers of the Gospel should be agreed that working men should receive a living wage for six days' work, and that where Sunday work must go on employers should be forced to substitute another day, so that every workman may have one day's rest in seven.

"I know one town in which there is a steel mill employing 4,000 men. When they worked seven days a week at ten hours a day they had seven kegs of beer and one of soft stuff at their annual picnic on Labor Day. Now that they work eight hours a day for six days they have seven kegs of soft stuff and only one of beer."

No mention was made of the Sunday saloon or of Sunday recreations, and it was agreed that the proposed crusade is to be non-religious and economical in its basis, and will be aimed exclusively at industrial plants that operate more than six days a week, where there is no public necessity for them to remain open. The church men count on their ability to attract the working man after he has gained his Sunday leisure.

MAY MODIFY DUEZ SALES.

French Government to Appeal from Judgments Confirming Liquidations.

PARIS, March 13.—The reopening of all the accounts and proceedings in connection with the liquidation of the property of the religious orders, and the possibility of the recovery of considerable sums which have disappeared through excessive fees and charges and "collusion sales," are now the hope of the Government, whose law officers believe they can appeal from the judgments confirming the liquidations, under a recent decision of the Court of Cassation.

It may even be possible to set aside some of these "collusion sales," notably those in connection with Stanislas College and the Chartreuse contracts. The Government papers intimate that there are several cases of apparent collusion between the liquidators and persons acting for the orders liquidated. Evidence to this effect, it is reported, has been discovered.

As an additional public assurance, the Government is also considering the advisability of replacing M. Le Marquis, who took over Duez's work, with a former Governor of the Bank of France. Many stories are published of the riotous living indulged in by Martin Gauthier, who is now under arrest as an accomplice, since he became associated with Duez. Before this he earned only $40 a month. After he entered the employ of Duez he attired himself in the height of fashion, used automobiles, and indulged in many other luxuries, and he had just purchased a château when he was arrested.

It is reported that the code to the names of those who were subsidized by Duez, and who used certain symbols in receipting for money given to them by Duez, has been discovered, and disclosures are imminent.

SEVEN KILLED IN MINE.

One of a Wilkesbarre Gang Escaped Explosion by a Few Seconds.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., March 13.—Seven men lost their lives by an explosion of gas in the No. 5 shaft of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, near here, late last night. Five of the men were members of a repair gang engaged in placing a hoisting engine in position, and the other two were miners.

The dead are: Owen Griffith, miner, aged 30; William Jenkins, miner, aged 42; Hugh Price, laborer, aged 45; C. Gaffney, laborer, aged 45; William Jones, laborer, aged 42; John O. Jones, laborer, aged 32; Evan Williams, pump man, aged 40. All of the victims except John O. Jones were married.

Martin Williams escaped death because he had left the point where the explosion occurred only a few seconds before the accident. It is thought the gas became ignited from one of the miner's lamps.

INSURANCE FOR HAPPINESS.

Something Organized, Mrs. Rice Helping, on a Mutual Basis, to Provide It.

The organization of a "Happiness and Health Insurance Company," (mutual,) announced without details yesterday, will be welcome news to many people. There is a constantly increasing demand for insurance policies along this line.

Among the Directors of the new company is Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who believes in making New York less noisy. Mrs. Rice said last night that she was not fully acquainted with the methods of the concern yet, but she had looked over the prospectus it sent her and found it "very pleasing."

She would not commit herself as to the nature of the undertaking further than to say that she had allowed her name to be associated with it.

MORE SUBWAY TRAINS IN SERVICE TO-DAY

Rush Hour Period Will Be Extended and Trains Put on Two-and-a-Half-Minute Headway.

DIFFICULTIES OF OPERATION

Hedley Says Those Who Insist on Crowding Into Packed Trains Cause Present Delays.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company will begin this morning to operate in the Subway the improved train service which has been under consideration for some weeks since the Public Service Commission directed an increase in the number of trains. As a result of a series of conferences between Frank Hedley, the General Manager of the Interborough, and the Commissioners and their transportation men it has been decided that the rush-hour schedule shall be extended from a little under an hour and a half every morning and evening to three hours in the morning and two and a half hours at night.

From Ninety-sixth Street every morning the expresses will be run at one minute and forty-eight seconds headway from 7 o'clock to 10, and again in the evening from 3:40 to 6:10 o'clock. As the trains have then to go either to South Ferry or Atlantic Avenue and return, it means that uptown expresses will be running on this short headway till about 11 o'clock in the morning and 7 o'clock at night. Between the rush hours the schedule of expresses will be increased from a three-minute to a two and a half-minute headway. There will also be some additional locals run.

Mr. Hedley explained yesterday that this schedule had been arrived at after a careful estimate of the passengers carried in the Subway, which had been made by both the Interborough and the Public Service Commission. He regarded, he said, the arrangement as an interesting example of the way in which the commission and the company could work together.

Would Work with Utilities Board.

"I have always said," he declared, "that there is a great opportunity for the Public Service Commission of the First District to stand between the companies and the public. We are glad of suggestions and reasonable criticisms from everybody, but the public does not understand the transportation problem we have to face.

"Here is a Subway designed to carry 450,000 persons, and it is asked to accommodate from 800,000 to 1,000,000. Like any other public building, it can be swamped, and the only remedy at present rests with the people themselves. If they would not crowd into the trains till they are indecently full we should be able to carry more over the road. But as soon as a crush occurs passengers cannot get in or out of the cars, the trains stand at the stations, and there are sure to be complaints.

"I won't say who is to blame. We, at any rate, have seen the need of more lines for years. It is worse to-day than ever, and Heaven knows what it will be five or six years from now!"

Mr. Hedley was asked whether it would ever be possible to decrease the headway to a minute and a half.

"It would be possible," he replied, "if we could get the crowds in such shape that the average stop at the stations could be reduced to thirty or thirty-five seconds, instead of the forty-five to seventy seconds they take now. From the train dispatcher to the highest officials, not including myself, the Interborough has the best men in this line of railroad operation in the world. If it had not it ought to have, for nowhere else is there a like problem. Think what we accomplish. We run expresses of eight cars, weighing 300 tons, at forty miles an hour on a 1-minute-and-48-seconds schedule, and they have never yet come together."

Speaking of the theatre crush at Times Square, Mr. Hedley expressed the opinion that Forty-second Street was bound to become, even more than it is at present, the great business centre uptown. He said that the Subway already increases the number and length of its trains to accommodate the theatregoers, but that this particular type of traffic is difficult to handle.

Crowds Badly Distributed.

Going south everybody crowds into the centre cars, and often seats in the middle of these are unoccupied because passengers prefer to stand near the entrances to be ready for the change at Grand Central. Going north the crush, Mr. Hedley declares, only lasts as far as Seventy-second Street. One of his operating engineers added to his explanation the fact that a careful count is kept of the theatre crowds as they empty themselves nightly into Times Square, so that the officials know two hours or so ahead how many passengers, within 150 or 200, they will have to provide for after 11 o'clock.

Mr. Hedley answered the criticisms of the number of side-door cars which run with the sign "Not Working" displayed by explaining that there are two kinds of side-door cars. One has been converted from cars already in stock by his own force, and these are used as trailers between the cars which carry motors. The other kind are new steel cars, equipped with motors, of which 250 were ordered from the manufacturers to be ready last September.

There has been a delay in the delivery of these, and they have been dribbling in at the rate of two or three a week. But the Interborough had to have enough converted cars ready to make up with these as soon as they arrived, and so at present it has in stock more than are necessary. They cannot, however, he run with their side doors in use unless the entire train is of side-door make, for fear of endangering the public.

In side-door trains the signal for starting is not given to the motorman by the bell pulled by a guard, but by a flashlight signal working automatically. This will not shine forth till the last side door is closed and locked, and so guarantees that every passenger is safely aboard. Mr. Hedley believes that if side doors were operated without this flash signal serious accidents would result through the trains starting too soon.

The enlargement of the Subway stations in the case of express stations to 455 feet to accommodate ten-car trains, and in the case of local stations to 285 feet, to fit local trains will, it is hoped, be finished in a year.

"It's a pretty thankless job from the engineering point of view," Mr. Hedley said yesterday, "to work with air drills and to blast out rock with trains running on so short a headway. It is hazardous, and needs great care. That means great cost. But we'll get through it all right."

HALL OF FAME ELECTORS.

Carnegie, Choate, Dolliver, Gen. Grant, and Robert Lincoln New Ones.

Chancellor Henry M. MacCracken, Chairman of the New York University Senate, which selects the electors of the Hall of Fame, announced yesterday the names of about a dozen new electors to fill the vacancies caused by death or resignation.

Among the publicists, editors, and authors, Andrew Carnegie succeeds Grover Cleveland, Joseph H. Choate succeeds George E. Post of Beirut, Syria; Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa succeeds Edward Eggleston, Cardinal Gibbons succeeds, Prof. George P. Fisher, Gen. Frederick D. Grant succeeds Bishop John F. Hurst, Robert Underwood Johnson succeeds R. W. Gilder, Robert Todd Lincoln succeeds Edward Everett Hale, and Gen. Horace Porter succeeds Edmund C. Stedman.

In the class of university and college Presidents, Abbott Lawrence Lowell takes the place of President Eliot, who is transferred to the division of publicists, editors, and authors. President James of the University of Illinois takes the place of the President of the University of Missouri, Chancellor McCormick of the University of Pittsburg succeeds the President of Washington University, St. Louis, and President Charles W. Dabney of the University of Cincinnati succeeds the President of the Western College for Women.

In the division of Professors of History and scientists the vacant places are filled by the election of George Burton Adams of Yale, George Lincoln Burr of Cornell, Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, President of the American Museum of Natural History, and Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress.

In the roll of Chief Justices, the appointment is to the office rather than to the person, so that new Chief Justices have been elected and have accepted from the States of Arkansas, Delaware, Idaho, Mississippi, Nevada, North Dakota, Oklahoma, and South Carolina.

Much speculation is expected among admirers of Poe's writings regarding the attitude of the new electors toward their favorite. It is generally believed that in Mr. Carnegie Poe's claims win a friend, whereas Mr. Cleveland steadfastly refused to vote for Poe. Mr. Johnson is also known to be a great admirer of Poe.

The possible number of names that may be chosen for the Hall of Fame this year are as follows: American men, twenty-one, to fill the twenty-one tablets not filled in 1900 or 1905, and five places assigned to 1910, making twenty-six; American men of foreign birth, three, for the places not filled in 1905, and one additional for 1910; American women, seven, to fill places left vacant in 1905, and one additional for 1910.

FLOWER GUILD SEEKS AID.

Contributions Wanted to Bring Brightness to Tenement Dwellers.

The New York City Branch of the National Plant, Flower, and Fruit Guild, with offices at 70 Fifth Avenue, which seeks to elevate the standard in the homes of the tenement dwellers and to carry brightness and cheer into the lives of the sick and poor, has sent out an appeal for aid.

Contributions of flowers, plants, fruit, and money are asked for. The guild distributes cut flowers, potted plants, fruit, and jelly to hospitals and homes and through settlements and other agencies directly to the people of the tenements.

It also puts in tenement houses window boxes filled with growing plants, establishes back-yard and vacant lot gardens wherever possible, and supplies material for free flower shows in public schools.

The 1909 annual report of the New York branch shows that 233,589 bunches of Summer flowers were distributed from country branches, 32,235 bunches of function flowers, 4,682 potted plants for gardens, window boxes, &c., 1,614 glasses of jelly, 175 pints of grape juice, 428 bushels of fruit and vegetables, and 1,500 packages of seed. Besides these, 600 window boxes were put in tenement homes, 20 back-yard gardens started, and a roof garden for the Red Cross Day Camp established for the Vanderbilt Clinic.

WIPE OUT OLD DEBTS OF KNICKERBOCKER

$23,000,000 in Time Certificates Redeemed To-day, Fifteen Months Before Due.

HAS $35,000,000 IN DEPOSITS

Capital Stock Increased to $3,200,000 and There's a $5,750,000 Surplus—The Men Who Reorganized It.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company discharges its last liabilities to its old depositors to-day. This act puts it once more in the position in which it stood before the panic of 1907, having anticipated the payment of time certificates of deposit by fifteen months. Besides being entirely rehabilitated the company now has increased capital and a large surplus.

The company closed its doors on Oct. 22, 1907, as a result of a run on the bank and the refusal of its Clearing House associate to continue clearing for it. At the time there were 17,000 depositors. It is generally conceded in the financial district that the work accomplished is one of the most notable examples of the fidelity of stockholders and depositors to an institution in the annals of the panic. Many well known men devoted weeks of hard work to readjusting the company's affairs, chief among them being Frederick G. Bourne, Herbert L. Satterlee, and William A. Tucker.

When the question of reopening the trust company hung in the balance the acceptance of voting Trusteeship of the stock by Henry C. Frick, Byron T. Herrick, and Lewis Cass Ledyard was really the turning point. A plan of reorganization was accepted by the stockholders and depositors which gave the reorganized company twenty-eight months to pay off time certificates of deposit amounting to $23,000,000. These certificates were redeemed in thirteen months. Since then the company has been paying off its "surplus A Certificates," and the last of these are now called for payment on March 31. Meantime the company is increasing its capital stock by the sale of 12,000 shares of new stock at $300 per share.

The actual process of working out the plan proposed has been encumbered with much detail. But in brief it consisted in periodical payments in cash on the time and surplus certificates held by depositors. To-day all the time certificates and 65 per cent. of the surplus certificates will have been paid off. For the remaining 35 per cent. of the surplus certificates the holders are either entitled to cash with interest on presentation or they have the right to subscribe pro rata to the authorized increase in the capital stock.

The new stock is already underwritten by a syndicate, of which Frederick G. Bourne, J. Horace Harding, and William A. Tucker are syndicate managers, acting without compensation. The final result of the present operation is that every depositor, representing $35,701,716 in all on March 26, 1908, will now get full payment of his claims, principal and interest.

One of the protective provisions which bound the depositors to the plan of resumption was the condition that dividend payments on capital stock should not be resumed until the surplus certificates were paid in full. That provision gave priority of claim on the part of the depositors to the profits of the company.

The final redemption and conversion of the surplus certificates now leaves the company in a position to resume dividends. After to-day the company will have a capital stock of $3,200,000 and a surplus of $5,750,000, with deposits of approximately $35,000,000. The company was spared a permanent expensive receivership by co-operation of its Depositors' and Stockholders' Committee with the officers and Directors, on whom the burden of reorganization rested.

The Executive Committee of the company, which has built up the reorganized company during the last two years, includes President Charles H. Keep, Frederick G. Bourne, J. Horace Harding, Franklin Q. Brown, William A. Tucker, G. Louis Boissevain, and the late Dumont Clarke.

UNVEIL PETROSINO MONUMENT

Two Nations Will Carry on His Work, Says Lieut. Enright.

Several hundred policemen, including about 200 members of the Lieutenants' Benevolent Association, took part yesterday in the unveiling of a monument to the memory of Lieut. Joseph Petrosino, who was shot to death in Palermo, Italy, a year ago Saturday, while on a secret mission to that country in connection with the Black Hand Society. The monument stands in the Petrosino plot in Calvary Cemetery, in Laurel Hill, L. I. It is composed of a pedestal of granite about twelve feet high, which is surmounted by a bust of Petrosino in marble, and bears this inscription:

> Erected by > Adelina Petrosino,
> in Memory of
> Her Beloved Husband,
> Joseph Petrosino;
> Died March 12, 1909.
> Aged 48 Years.

Many visitors to Calvary Cemetery were attracted to the scene, and long before the hour for the unveiling the place around the monument was jammed with men, women, and children.

Mrs. Petrosino broke down as she viewed the bust of her dead husband, and had to be led away to recover her composure.

Father Chidwick, Chaplain of the Police Department, opened the exercises with prayer, and Lieut. Richard E. Enright then unveiled the monument. In his address Lieut. Enright said:

"The man who sleeps here was a true son of the people, a typical policeman, and a typical citizen of New York. There is an irresistible conflict now going on between the forces of darkness, anarchy, and riot, and the forces of light, law, and order. Those who encompassed his death gained but a shallow victory, for Petrosino's death has aroused two nations who are resolved that law and order shall prevail. Let us dedicate our lives to complete the work he left undone, that liberty, law, and order may prevail in the gates of this fair city."

It was said that about every police officer off duty attended the unveiling, and there were a score or more of Captains on the ground, in addition to Inspectors Kelley, Titus, McCaffery, Sweeney, and Holahan.

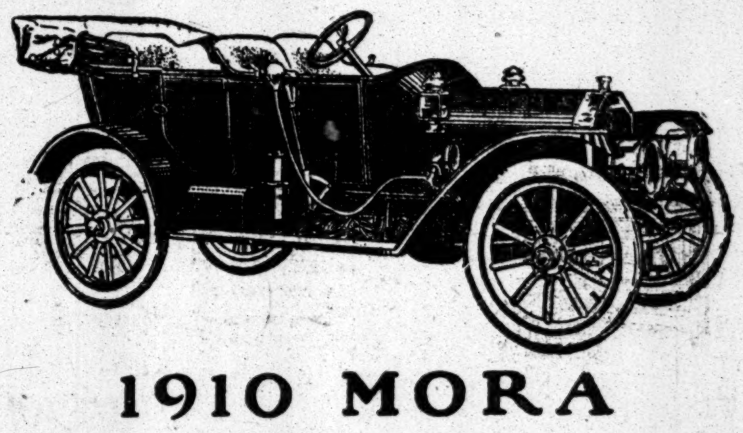
ALL THE WORLD NO POWER PLANT LIKE
MORA

The "Queen Bee" of All Torpedoes



1910 MORA
Light Four Torpedo

Here is a model that is as beautiful in its lines of construction, as it is perfect in its mechanical performance. It is the newest conceit of the MORA factory—built from stem to stern in a plant that limits its production to the number of cars it can build—and build right.

36 by 4 Wheels. Five Passenger. Price $2,650.00

The lines of the Torpedo follow the latest ideas of body construction—and will undoubtedly form the lines of the "car of the future." The high-back seat gives an added comfort, as well as a luxurious appearance. The body itself is of sheet metal, with mouldings rolled in. Upholstering is of smooth padded black leather, with spring edge cushions. A racy steering column gives the car the rakish appearance so much desired. Equipment includes the famous MORA trunk.

When you stop to figure that MORA efficiency has no peer at any price; that MORA performance is a matter of world-wide record; and that MORA price is at least a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars less than it should be—for a car in its class—won't it pay you to investigate the MORA?

PRICE NOT THE SOLE FACTOR OF CREDIT.

With an offering of $50,000,000 of city bonds impending, and with the hopes of many other comforts and necessities depending upon their price, it is the part of good citizenship to put the best foot foremost. Some other cities and a few railways sell bonds at the same moment at a higher price, that is at a lower yield, and it is inferred that the credit of New York is lower.

That is a natural but not a necessary conclusion. The bonds of Baltimore, for example, represent pure credit, that is a price based upon yield to maturity, and payment. Their price represents nothing else, because the market for Baltimore bonds is so narrow that days must be selected for advantageous buying and selling, the market not being always inviting. It is otherwise with New York City bonds. They are the nearest American approach to a security into which a million or multiples can be put and withdrawn with gain of interest for an interval, and with least risk of loss of principal. The price of Government bonds is altogether factitious, and the yield is so small that they are no rival in this respect to New York bonds.

It might seem that this desirable quality would enhance the price, and on occasions it may do so. But this virtue has its defects. If it is an attraction that New York bonds are in demand for temporary investment, it is a depressing factor that bargains in them are constantly being undone, and the market is called upon to absorb large quantities suddenly. The market is so large and free that fluctuations are minimized, but nevertheless the depressing factor of large sales is always present, and unfortunately New York itself is always bearing its own market. It is so constantly asking so much accommodation that its securities are never allowed a breathing space in which they can overtake their worth as a pure credit investment, divested of the money market factor above mentioned. New York's securities are worth more than their price, which is only another way of saying that its credit is better than appears. In no degree is the lowness of their price due to fears about repayment of principal with interest. The city's creditors are easy in their minds, however it may be with the taxpayers.

Unfortunately there is no relief in sight in this respect. The city is so thriving that its demands for more money can neither cease nor await a leisurely satisfaction. This creates a condition in which the city is under strong incentive to confine its expenditures to its own immediate uses. The city's funds should be confined in their applications to purposes which cannot be done for the city by private funds. Every dollar thus spent for the city spares the city the spending of that dollar, and permits expenditure of that cash for objects otherwise not attainable. This point is illustrated by the debate in the Board of Estimate regarding the expenditure of city funds for a city building, which was antagonized by the demand that the money should be saved for subways. Why should not the city have both?

The city is living upon a forced credit balance. The other day the Controller issued the city's first balance sheet—a fact which in itself is a little startling. The document so acclaimed appears to be a mere bookkeeper's balance. Thus among the assets we find the entry "From revenue bonds to be issued $64,902,607." It would not stimulate the credit of any other corporation to make such an entry. It would strengthen even the credit of New York to balance its books by the entry of cash received, rather than by the entry of cash to be borrowed, at a time when some wish to borrow, say $200,000,000, to build subways, which could not become income producers for some years at best.

Another way in which the city might keep its obligations off the market, and thus improve their price by reducing the output, is by borrowing from its debtors, instead of from lenders. Each year the city borrows in anticipation of tax payments which it bothers many taxpayers to pay in a single payment, and which they would be glad to pay in installments in advance of the legal day. There are objections to altering the day upon which the taxes become a legal lien, but it is hard to see any objection to the city issuing quasi certificates of payment of taxes in advance, the same to be applied in payment of taxes when due. Nobody would be under compulsion to make such deposits on account of taxes, and whoever availed themselves of such a privilege would take the city out of the money market to that extent, and thus relieve the pressure of constant sales of city obligations. If it were possible to create a doubt whether a prospective buyer of city bonds could supply himself, in other words if the market were converted from an "offered" to a "bid" price, the city's credit would enjoy an apparent improvement, even though it were not intrinsically any better.

POETIC DRAMA, OLD AND NEW.

It seems worth while to say that a week which will see the first performance in New York of a mediaeval mystery of MAURICE MAETERLINCK, the fourth act of IBSEN'S "Brand," (probably his masterwork in poetry,) and KIT MARLOWE'S "Dr. Faustus" should be a week of theatrical uplifting. With such a bill as "Sister Beatrice" and the excerpt from "Brand" The New Theatre seems more likely to fulfill its mission and justify its existence than by dalliance with contemporary drama of a melodramatic type, of which the so-called commercial theatre already gives us plenty.

The second play of the pioneer of Elizabethan drama, and originator of the "mighty line" of English dramatic verse, will be given by Mr. BEN GREET in his heroic effort to revive interest in the literary drama at the Garden Theatre. MARLOWE'S "Dr. Faustus" was probably the first attempt to dramatize the world-wide legend of the learned doctor and the devil. It illustrates the poet's fiery eloquence, his turbulent spirit, and his riotous imagination. It inspired GOETHE to the composition of one of the greatest philosophical and dramatic poems ever written. The students know it well, but to the modern theatrical stage it is a stranger. There is good Shakespearean reason, therefore, for giving it welcome.

BREADSTUFFS AND COTTON.

Apart from the legislative factor in domestic conditions the deepest shadow on the business outlook has been the overdone speculations in breadstuffs and cotton. They have been held off the market for higher prices in such volume that foreign buyers could not afford to take them, and consequently our exports have been in such reduced total that the money market has felt the strain of making good the deficiency. There are now signs that this depressing factor may find some relief.

Certainly the speculators in cotton would be prudent to take notice that, according to figures now published, the British cotton trade was able to increase its February exports of cotton goods over £1,000,000, although it imported less staple by £900,000. If Lancashire, after a prolonged period of test, can do as well as that it seems to have cotton in supply or to be able to get it from other than American sources. It would seem that the contest between those who can not or will not spin American cotton and those who won't sell it except at prohibitive prices is going more in favor of those who want to wear cotton than those who want to make money by "holding" it. The Liverpudlians are much interested in the English visit of our eminent Mr. PATTEN, who was treated so rudely in Manchester, and would like to know whether he is there to take profits or to prevent losses. You never can tell, except that things are seldom what they seem.

This is especially true of the present wheat market. The Government figures of the reserves in farmers' hands are illuminating regarding the bad men who have been increasing the cost of living by speculation and extortion. The farmers are the rascals. Other owners have sold the visible supply until it is less than last year by 11,000,000 bushels, but the farmers hold 173,000,000 bushels of wheat, 30,000,000 bushels more than last year, and more than any other year except two. The amount of corn held is only slightly above last year, but it has been exceeded in only one year of the last ten. The private estimates had been for larger amounts, and the grain markets show disappointment, which may be subject to revision if it should prove—as is the frequent experience—that the private estimates are nearer the truth. The canny cultivators are not likely to exaggerate the stocks which they must sell before the next crop.

However the truth may be, the fact is disclosed that others have been supplying foreign markets while our first hands have been holding. We have plentiful stocks of what others want, and which they are able to get without paying our prices. We must export something to pay our debts abroad, and gold and securities are the cheapest goods we have. It would be a blessing in disguise if our staple markets should get into range with those of the world, and enable us to empty our bins before we refill them.

SETTLEMENT OF STRIKES.

If the country wishes more Philadelphia strikes the way to get them is to show weakness in meeting the issues reached there. If any American wishes to know where his sympathies really lie he can ascertain by asking himself how much he will mulct himself for the sake of a dispute urged in the manner of these strikers. More specifically, the question for Philadelphians would be whether they would pay higher street car fares in order to make possible the payment of higher wages to the strikers. Whoever would not do this is in the position of supporting favors to one party by duress upon the other.

All users of anthracite coal regret the increased price they have paid ever since the strike was settled in the manner now being invoked in the car strike. The railways have made it clear that they will raise rates if they are compelled to raise wages. There is probably no one who does not wish everybody to get more of the good things of this world, and there are few who will not cheerfully vote money out of anybody else's pocket toward that object.

The real question underlying all these strikes and those which may follow is how much each of us will add to our individual costs of living in order to make money for others. If we are not mistaken, we are all agreed that the cost of living must rise no further. In that case the only question left is the economic wage. The universal object of sympathy is the man who is willing to take what the market offers. The universal enemy is the man who demands an uneconomic wage by violence.

THE COURT HOUSE SITE.

The speakers at the Republican Club luncheon on Saturday to discuss the proposal to build the new County Court House in City Hall Park dwelt on the fact that the objections to the selection of that site are practical, not merely aesthetic. Chambers Street between Broadway and Centre Street is already a congested thoroughfare. To build a huge Court House occupying all of the southern side of the block is, for that reason alone, impractical.

Mr. ATTERBURY of the American Institute of Architects' committee pointed out, practically, the cost of congestion to the city. The park site will not be cheap. It is the most expensive that could be chosen. The opposition to the site grows, and it is a wholesome, well-meant opposition, based on a clear comprehension of the needs of the city at present and a fair estimate of its needs in the future.

Romeo and Juliet were both under age, but theirs was not a model marriage or a happy one. The marriage of minors is not generally desirable for the good of the community. The leisure for repentance is entirely too long. Chief Clerk SCULLY of the Bureau of Marriage Licenses is wise to go slow in the matter of issuing licenses to boys and girls. Supreme Court Justice MILLER'S opinion, communicated to a reporter of THE SUNDAY TIMES, that the Domestic Relations act should be amended in order to clarify the provisions relating to the marriage of minors, ought to be considered by the Legislature.

The Chicago microscope that can measure 1-2500th of an inch may be useful in measuring the breadth of mind of the members of Congress who have been cavilling over the recognition of the great achievement of Commander PEARY.

The Los Angeles Times is mistaken. We knew perfectly well when we spoke of the growing tendency to abbreviate to "Los" the name of the bustling, wideawake town for which it purveys the news that the town "was named in an hour when Destiny stood breathless on the hill tops and the Star of Empire held the constellations tied to the post." The exact conditions had escaped us, but we were aware in a general way that the name was "wrought from the singing soul of Castille to the music of golden harps." But what does it all matter? Californians persistently call the place "Los."

The peacock season will be at its height in the grounds of Warwick Castle when Col. ROOSEVELT visits there in May. But he must not take his shotgun. The rule against shooting the fowl is strictly enforced. They are preserved for strictly decorative purposes, and against the lichen gray walls of the Warwickshire gardens their tail feathers are effectively displayed. The Colonel must bear in mind, too, that Warwick Castle is no place for unguarded speech. He should remember "Dear Maria" in the gracious presence of Babbling Brooke.

Mr. FAIRBANKS is homeward bound before the general European jubilation has begun. Two Richmonds in the field is one too many, of course, even when the field includes Italy, England, and France. Mr. FAIRBANKS'S return to his native land, however, will be made an occasion for rejoicing by the Ohio Society of this city. He has not collected fauna, and has no hunting bag to exhibit, but doubtless he has accumulated much information and he may impart some of it to his entertainers.

Another sign of revolution in England is the uprising of the poultry farmers against the breeding of foxes. The fox-hunting Squire has presumably passed into history, but fox hunting is still the gentleman's favorite sport, and it threatens to vanish, too, like the red-faced, red-coated, hearty, and hard-riding Squire. The fox is no longer respected as a "social tradition." Its extermination is threatened, with vehemence. But every old-fashioned Englishman knows that England has been "going to the dogs" since the Revolution of 1688.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Outrageous, and Yet Explicable. Again the exclusion of men wearing the Government's uniform from a place of amusement nominally open to all well-behaved persons who have the price of admission is to be the subject of widespread and indignant comment. This time the victims of the familiar outrage were two marines, a corporal and a private, who were not allowed to enter a theatre in Washington, though they had bought tickets and both their conduct and condition were beyond criticism. When turned back at the door, they demanded an explanation, but made no scene and quietly departed after their money had been paid back.

The matter has been taken up by the Navy Department, but all it seems to have learned from a conference with the manager of the theatre is that the exclusion was under a house rule of general application, prohibiting the admission of "persons conspicuously dressed." Of course no such rule ever was or could be enforced at any theatre or other place of public amusement, for none of them would think of excluding a distinguished foreigner because his garments were of sufficiently unfamiliar cut or material to make him an object of attention, or any woman because she was conspicuously well dressed. The marines were barred simply because their uniforms marked them as members of a class whose close association with his other patrons the manager deemed undesirable because, on the whole, unprofitable.

That he thought so because of any special lack of patriotism or of appreciation for the country's defenders would be an absurd assumption. Underlying his rule, intended for occasional and discretionary application, may have been the memory of some army or navy officer who had made a row on finding himself seated next to a man between whom and himself military custom established a social chasm upon whose maintenance discipline is supposed—not without reason—to depend. More probably a little experience and much tradition had convinced the manager that the sailor ashore and the soldier on leave can be expected to push hilarity to extremes.

Of course the experience with a few creates no valid excuse for excluding the innocent and well intentioned many, and tradition is the poorest of guides after conditions have changed, but it is wise to remember that it is a condition of public sentiment and apprehension, not a theory, that confronts the amusement purveyor, and he probably regrets as much as anybody that the policy he considers himself forced to adopt has the effect of perpetuating the very evils of which it is the outcome. What Mr. HOBSON may be able to do in this matter remains to be seen.

Opportunity for Reparation. Representative J. HAMPTON MOORE of Pennsylvania did himself, his State, and his country credit by the speech in which he advocated the passage by Congress of a joint resolution accepting as final the decision of the National Geographic Society on the documentary proofs submitted to it by Mr. PEARY.

The course of the members of the Naval Affairs Committee to whom was referred the question as to a proper recognition and reward by the Government of the attainment of the pole by an officer in the United States Navy has been marked from the beginning of their deliberations by what it would be charitable to call gross ignorance, and can only be accurately characterized by the terms fitting the mean and petty jealousy of which the sub-committee has made itself the instrument and voice. It is almost inconceivable that at this late day there is in any sane mind a sincere doubt that Mr. PEARY reached the pole. There certainly is none in any mind capable of reaching inevitable conclusions from known facts, and even more of disgust than of indignation has been created by the grave revival of the illusion that Dr. COOK and his fictions are worthy of present consideration.

The experts selected by the Geographic Society were equally competent and unprejudiced. They had Mr. PEARY before them, and they gave his records careful study. Their verdict was not hastily given, but it was unanimous, and it has been accepted by scientists and explorers everywhere as the formal and official confirmation of a narrative that did not really need corroboration. For Congress to demand anything more—for it to condition the award of its belated honors on the violation by Mr. PEARY of his contracts and the sacrifice of his property—would be nothing less than malignant persecution of an already much-injured man, whose only offense is that he defended himself against an impudent swindler and forced a lot of credulous people reluctantly to admit that they were mistaken.

Congress has but one decent and honest course to take, and that is to relieve its Naval Affairs Committee of a task which it has proved itself incompetent to perform and by prompt action to demonstrate that republics are not always ungrateful. Every hour of delay adds to the Nation's humiliation and further justifies foreign derision of our blindness and ineptitude.

Illiterates May Be Useful. Dr. ELIOT'S suggestion that the time to apply an educational test to immigrants is not on their arrival, but, if ever, when they apply for their final naturalization papers, is an excellent one. Of course, the worst of the strangers who come to our somewhat too hospitable shores are not the illiterates, nor are they the least valuable additions to our population.

In not a few of the countries from which our immigrants sail, inability to read and write is no indication, as it usually is here, of mental deficiency. There it is simply the mark of the laboring classes, or at any rate their common misfortune, and the absence of elementary education, when it arises from lack of facilities to acquire it, is a fault comparatively trivial and easily remedied.

But when an immigrant lives in this country the number of years required as one qualification for citizenship and has not yet seen the need of the power to read and write, or is without the brains to acquire it, he might well be left in his voteless state, for he is obviously incapable of taking an intelligent part in the government of the country.

Of course every would-be citizen is now subjected to an educational test, but it is usually of the most perfunctory sort and proves little as to actual literacy. A more rigid examination, covering more ground than the reading, or pretended reading, of a few sentences, might well be made, and those who failed to pass it would be no loss to our ruling class.

Pension for City Office Holders.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

E. T. Brennan attempted to answer my letter opposing a pension for office holders, and claiming that office holders often work every night until 8 o'clock. If this is true, how is it that $30,000 weekly, as is estimated, has been saved by the present administration in abolishing superfluous positions? Political positions must be attractive, or why should thousands apply for a small number of vacancies? Why should office holders receive a pension any more than any other human citizen that has worked hard for any business concern? I have a copy of The City Record before me, and know what I am writing about. If every clerk earning $2,000 to $5,000 and working for the city were cut down to $1,500 and were compelled to work from 8 to 6 and until 4 o'clock on Saturday, none would resign. A good many of them never earned more than [illegible] outside.

DENIES QUARREL WITH PEARY.

Norman J. Lee, on Behalf of His Brother, Contradicts Matt Hensen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with some interest an article in an evening paper yesterday, dated at Syracuse, March 11, quoting Matt Hensen relative to Commander R. E. Peary.

That part of the article referring to the Independence Bay matter, in which he speaks of Hugh J. Lee, is particularly interesting to me, as Hugh J. Lee is my brother and was a volunteer at Independence Bay, as indicated, and remained with Peary when the balance of the party, with the exception of Hensen, returned home. When my brother returned home from that trip we lived together in Meriden, Conn., and quite naturally we held much conversation relative to the expedition, and I never have heard him utter a word of complaint against Peary's treatment of him.

The article in question states that Lee refused to accompany Peary on the last expedition, and that I wish to positively deny, in the absence of Hugh J. Lee, who is permanently located at St. Michael, Alaska, in which vicinity he has been for seven or eight years. There was no consideration given to the question of his accompanying Peary on his last expedition, either by the Commander or himself.

THE PROPOSED "DREADNOUGHT."

Urges That $18,000,000 Be Not Wasted in Its Building.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to add a word of approval to those already expressed regarding your editorial article of Feb. 23, entitled "One-Tenth of One Per Cent." It certainly encourages the constantly increasing number of persons who believe that wars are a barbarous and wasteful method of settling international differences to know that a method is even being seriously considered for curtailing the extravagant expenditures now made for the creation and maintenance of great armaments on land and sea. May we not hope that your influence will be exerted in opposition to the recently expressed proposition of Secretary Meyer to urge the building of an eighteen-million-dollar battleship, and the ultimate establishment of the United States in the first place among the naval powers of the world?

The plea that an enormous increase in the number of our battleships is necessary for the protection of the Pacific Coast is a feeble argument. Few but the jingoes in either country believe that any question is likely to arise between Japan and ourselves that cannot be settled by getting together and talking it over, or by its submission to an impartial tribunal of arbitration. Neither nation wants to fight, or, as a nation, has any desire to be anything but the best of friends with the other. Nothing could be more effective in exciting suspicion of us by the Japanese than the course outlined by Secretary Meyer, with the acknowledged object of making us invulnerable to her attack; and nothing would be more likely to arouse her spirit of belligerency than the bullying boast that "we're not afraid, come on." With nations, as with individuals, the only result of a fight is to determine which is the strongest combatant, and as our present civilization does not permit that method of settling differences in the one case it certainly cannot be justified in the other.

A Talk on Orphans.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The other day I stood with a man, a tender-hearted man, at the corner of Broadway and Fifty-sixth Street, and watched two groups of orphan children, boys and girls, pass along under charge of two or three Sisters. The man sighed as he looked at them and said it almost made him weep to see all those poor little ones bereft of a mother's love and thrown on the cold charity of an unfeeling world, &c. Just then we were joined by a third man of a different type, and the tender-hearted man went over it again. But the other man did not contribute any tears. On the contrary, "Rats," said he, "it's the best thing ever happened to them. Look at the bunch of them, all well-fed and well-clothed, and under proper guardianship. They are kept off the streets, except as much as is good for them. They have playgrounds and are given all the exercise they need; they are taught good manners and good habits; somebody is looking after their welfare day and night; the boys are taught trades and the girls how to be good housekeepers; their whole lives are passed under so much better influences than most of them would have had if they had not been orphans that they and all the rest of us should smile, not weep, as we see them trotting along with the good Sisters. Mother's love and parental affection are all right in theory, but I am here to say that they have small chance for development and application among our poor, and among the well-to-do and the rich they are the cause of the majority of the undesirables that come from those classes. Have you ever noticed that an adopted child is always better than the born kind and grows into a more desirable adult? Ninety-nine times in a hundred the result is due to the fact that parental affection didn't spoil it." He said a lot more of the same sort, and later the tender-hearted man told me he thought he was a brute, but I don't know. Maybe he was and maybe he wasn't. It depends. Or does it?

Letter Boxes Here and in Berlin.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos our letter boxes, are they not out of date altogether? I think that the same kind of boxes have been in use now for thirty years. Do they not appear very antiquated?

Can our letter boxes not be made after the style which I have seen in Berlin, Germany? They are big, square, clean looking boxes fastened to the buildings and serve at the same time as an ornament.

They have other advantages in comparison with our obsolete system. No postman who goes out collecting letters from the different boxes is allowed to touch a single letter with his hands outside the Post Office. He pushes his bag into a slide underneath the box, opens the bottom—consisting of two halves—with a key, and out drop the whole contents of the box all at once. With another key he is turning a time table which through a small round opening in front shows the next emptying. This latter manipulation is of importance because it indicates for the controlling inspector that the box has, de facto, been emptied. All this only takes half a minute or less, and off goes the man on his tricycle to the next box. Here is an easy, quick, and up-to-date system compared to ours.

Central American Revolutions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to note that you are willing to give the devil his due. The Central American revolutions, which have become a popular subject for opera bouffe in this country, are really not laughing matters. Way back in the seventies I took part in one of these affairs with a company of twenty-five American adventurers. Believe me, we had our hands full, and found that the halfbreed Central American is as good a fighter, long range or abreast, as you can find anywhere in this wide world. His great dread of the American exists only in the novels of young Americans, like R. H. Davis, &c.

Commercial Illustrating.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Nelson A. Gottlieb's communication on teaching commercial illustration in evening high schools was something new to me. Being myself directly interested in this art, I have not heard of any school except one—and that is now non-existent—which taught commercial illustrating in the sense it is considered in the commercial field, and which I presume is also meant by Mr. Gottlieb.

Will Mr. Gottlieb kindly furnish a list of the schools where this commercial art is taught, thereby not only helping an individual cause but also spreading the names of such institutions where its good work may be extended?

MERRITT EXPLAINS STATE FOREST VIEWS

He Would Amend Present Law to Permit Use of Forest Land to Develop Water Power.

UNDER STATE CONTROL

Proposed Change Would Add Millions to the Taxable Property of the State and Develop Profitable Industries.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE NEW YORK TIMES of Tuesday, March 1, contained an editorial entitled, "What Does Mr. Merritt Want?" I want the concurrent resolution proposing an amendment to Section 7 of Article 7 of the Constitution to be amended so as to permit the use of lands in the forest preserve for these purposes:

1. Lands in the forest preserve may be used for the storage of water and the development of water power and the transmission of electric current under State control, and for that purpose the Legislature may authorize the use of land for the erection and maintenance of dams, the impounding of water, and all other improvements thereon necessary and incidental to such purposes, provided, however, that the quantity of land so used shall never exceed 3 per centum of the total area of the forest preserve.
2. Lands in the forest preserve may be used for the construction of highways and at the expense of the State.
3. The Forest, Fish, and Game Commissioner, with the approval of the Governor, may lease for periods not longer than ten years sites of not more than five acres each for camps within the forest preserve.
4. The Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner may, with the approval of the Governor, sell and convey lands now owned or hereafter acquired by the State, which are situated wholly outside the boundaries of the Adirondack and Catskill parks, as now defined by law, and the proceeds from lands so sold and conveyed shall only be used by the State in acquiring lands situated wholly within the boundaries of said parks.

My direct personal interest in water storage is due to the fact that I have been interested in water power development on the Raquette River for more than twenty years, and I make no apology for the fact.

Section 7 of Article 7, as it now exists in the Constitution, was adopted by the people to correct evils of a very serious nature at the time when the Constitution was adopted. It met conditions which no longer exist. Timber stealing did exist, and this was all the evil sought to be corrected; because the stealing of timber was intimately connected with leasing, selling, or exchanging of timber lands. Advantage was taken, in the entirely unorganized condition of the State's forest interests, of the lack of information not only on the part of the people generally, but the State officials, and of the fact that in those days the great Adirondack territory was little known, not accurately mapped, and to a large extent without definite marked lines delimiting the holdings of the State or corporations or private persons. At the time when this constitutional provision was adopted, Adirondack land was not worth more than from $1.50 to $2.50 an acre—land that to-day would be worth ten times that amount.

There was no discussion then of forestation or reforestation or conservation, because those problems had not arrived. The people would not have been tolerant of an expenditure of money to plant forest trees when they could be bought by the acre as virgin forest for the price I have named. But the times have changed. I want the Constitution amended to meet the necessities of the State and of corporate and private persons as they exist now and seem likely to exist hereafter. I want the Constitution amended to provide for the use of a limited amount of State land, which shall never exceed 3 per cent. of the total area of the forest preserve, for the storage of water and the development of water power and the establishment of lines for the transmission of electric current.

I want it done under State control, not under State ownership. I do not believe that corporations or persons should be permitted to do in the Adirondacks that sort of thing which was done when land was worth nothing, or substantially nothing, and those fastnesses of the woods but little visited, when the storage of water was simply for the purpose of driving logs from the forest to the mill.

The State has no sites within the blue line on which water powers to develop large units can be established. The places where the rivers fall down the hills are outside of the Adirondack Park. The Adirondack Park lies on a great plateau of an average height of about 1,500 feet above the sea level, with mountains and ridges projecting from that general level. It comprises a very large area—nearly one-quarter of the surface acreage of the State. Lying among the hills and mountains are hundreds of lakes and ponds, all lying on about the same level. From this plateau fall to the sea on one side or another the great rivers of the State, and as they flow from that plateau they pass over rapids and falls which afford sites for the development of power.

Those sites the State does not own, and can only acquire by the exercise of the power of eminent domain. Those sites afford opportunity for the development of business which will employ capital and labor and pay State and local taxes. The State can in the Adirondack plateau store the waters of Spring and Fall, which are renewed with absolute certainty year after year, and, holding the overplus of Spring and Autumn floods, regulate the flow of the streams to produce the highest practical minimum flow of cubic feet of water per second, and every proposed reservoir will include some land, if only a few acres, that is a part of the forest preserve.

I want the State to be reimbursed for any actual advancement of money, for any actual furnishing of credit, for any actual oversight, any operation or maintenance; and I want the people who receive the benefit to pay these expenses. I want them, after they have done that, to have the opportunity to exert to the highest degree their wisdom in the investment of capital, their ability in the management of productive industry. I want to see them turn all the wheels and light all the lights and move all the cars that the great commercial interests of the State of New York require, until the last water horse power of energy has been employed.

I want such floods as the one which has devastated Herkimer and the Hudson Valley this month controlled. I would rather see this amendment adopted, together with appropriate legislation then, if I could, to bring into the State of New York, by legislation, the coal measures of Pennsylvania or the gold and copper mines of the Far West. I want the State to have a chance to develop outside of the City of New York and the other cities of the State.

Some people have thought that reforestation of denuded timber lands would take the place of artificial storage. When you consider that the figures of the Forest Commissioner show that we are cutting our timber three times as fast as it is growing, this does not seem to be a hopeful view. Moreover, there never was a time, even when the country was covered with primeval forests that there were not floods in Spring and Autumn, and from the point of view of economical development in this day and age, these floods, even after the land is reforested, should be stored.

No good citizen desires to devastate the Adirondacks or the Catskills. If every acre were taken that the most enthusiastic advocate of power development desires, the total could not exceed 55,000 acres, which would be only 3.9 per cent. of the State's holdings, and as a matter of fact four-fifths to-day are low and swampy lands and might better be covered with water than left exposed.

I want conservation and a conservation that means use. I want to see the beauty of the woods conserved, and then I want roads built through the Adirondacks so that the people of the State may go and see the beauties of that region and enjoy its health and life giving air. Other States are spending large sums of money to manufacture natural scenery, and we are declining to take advantage of what Providence has given us.

The State cannot build a road across its own property and cut a tree to do it, by the decision of the Attorney General. I want it changed. I want the roads built. I want people to have an opportunity to rent small lots of land for camp sites. I want all the people to have a chance to enjoy their property, and not have its use confined to a few multimillionaires who appear the self-constituted guardians of the interests of all.

The Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner states officially that the forest fires of two years ago cost the State $2,000,000. I know that much of this burned timber could have been sold and that the State might have at least realized $500,000. I want this system changed. The interests of the people, the value of the land, and the holdings of the State are of sufficient importance to-day so that this department, under such supervision as it now has, will become the agent of the most important department of State acting on progressive lines.

The people interested in electro-hydraulics—the power companies—have not endeavored to gain entrance within the forest blue line for the purpose of getting possession of any site for the development of power. They have not sought to get possession of the timber of the Adirondacks belonging to the State, for the purpose of owning or selling it. The private owners of lands in the Adirondack Park now hold three-fourths of that territory and are cutting the timber as fast as they can market it to advantage. The State ought to buy all of this land; but at the present price of Adirondack land this would involve an enormous investment, and one which would not be justified provided no intelligent system of forestry is to be undertaken by which dead and down timber, burned timber, and mature timber, under proper conditions, can be marketed.

As to the renting or leasing of State lands, it should not be done except in small lots, solely for the purpose of Summer homes, under lease from the Forest Commissioner, without any permission to cut or remove any timber or to in any way change any natural conditions, all to be subject to the supervision and control of the Forest Commissioner. I would provide that in case any timber was planted or removed, it could only be done by the direction and under the supervision of the Forest Commissioner.

An Appeal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

City officials are continually sending to this association cases of pitiable distress. School Principals and attendance officers, Board of Health physicians and nurses, city hospitals, probation officers, and the police are thus laying on our association a welcome but heavy burden in addition to that which comes to us from private sources. The city's charter permits it to grant no outdoor relief except to the blind.

To answer calls that it cannot refuse the association is spending far more than it is receiving, and needs $20,000 to balance the Winter's account. For this sum we appeal to the citizens of New York.

THE TALE OF THE RAT.

(Hold to that;)
And the tail of the cat
Ear-awake on the mat,
(Hold 'em fast!)
For the tale of the rat
Like the tail of the cat
Cannot last.

Now, the rat is a rat;
He was born unto that
In the nether obscure.
Where is mother made sure
That her tribe should endure.
For mothers are mothers,
Or poor, or more poor,
The wabbling world round;
Though they nestle their kin underground,
In palace, or cabin, or pound;
In charnel, or castle, or mound—
A bed for their kind must be found.

Born deep in the dark, do you mind,
In the name of its Dad can the blind
Little bit of herself—that's the rat—
Determine the Why and Whereat,
And "the thing to be done and all that"?
I talk of the rat that is bare
With his tiny red tail in the air,
(And as blind as the rest of us are;)
And the mother that found for him there;
That foraged to find for him there;
At the risk of the cat
Unasleep on the mat,
Or elsewhere.

Last, I point to the rat that has grown,
That can gnaw through a knot or a bone;
Of the rat that has "come to his own";
Of the never-say-fail,
Blooming rat of avail,
With two hundred rings in his rubberoid tail,
A hand, and a hoist, and a helm, and a flail;
Of the rat that was born in the dank
With a thin, hunted mother to thank;
Of the rat gnawing up to a glimpse of the day
He can never enjoy as most of us may;
Of the rat coming up from the reek
With his coat ever clean, ever sleek.
Consider the tale of the rat that must dare,
And the tale of the cat, if you happen to care,

HOW MR. DAMROSCH BECAME CONDUCTOR

MEETING TSCHAIKOWSKY

Visits to Liszt and Brahms—He Heard the First "Parsifal" Performances at Baireuth.

Musical organizations which can celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversaries are rare in America. The Kneisel Quartet is one of them. The New York Symphony Society is several years older than the Quartet, but its present conductor, Walter Damrosch, will have been arranging its programmes and waving his baton over the men in the band for exactly twenty-five years on March 27.

To celebrate this anniversary, the New York Symphony Society will to-morrow night give the same programme with which the young conductor made his début with the organization, on March 27, 1885. This includes Schubert's C major symphony, Saint-Saëns's barcarolle, "A Night in Lisbon"; Weber's concertstück for piano and orchestra, played to-morrow night, as it was twenty-five years ago, by Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, and Liszt's "Die Hunnenschlacht."

"My father never in any way tried to influence me in my choice of a career," said Walter Damrosch yesterday. "But my thoughts were all turned toward a musical life almost from the beginning. Before my father's death I was conducting the Newark Choral Society, and had produced such works as Rubinstein's 'Tower of Babel' and Berlioz's 'Damnation of Faust.' When he saw that I was determined to be a musician, my father assisted me in every way possible. I was taught to play several instruments and bathed, as it were, in a musical atmosphere.

"My father died on Feb. 15, 1885. I was 23 years old. My father was giving a season of German opera at the Metropolitan Opera House, and during his illness I was called upon to conduct 'Tannhäuser' and 'Die Walküre.' You see I had studied these scores carefully with him, and I never missed either rehearsals or performances at the Opera House. After his death there was the road tour of the company. There was no one else but me to be considered at the time. The company did not wish to abandon the road tour. In consequence I conducted 'Tannhäuser' in Chicago on Feb. 24, 1885, nine days after my father's death.

"My operatic experiences were long and varied after that. I was second conductor with Anton Seidl at the Opera House for a while, and I had a company of my own later.

"My orchestral experiences began with the concert of the New York Symphony Society, which my father had founded, on March 27, 1885. In those days six concerts a year were considered plenty for any orchestra to give. This was the last concert of the season, and had been postponed some weeks on account of my father's death. I cannot remember now whether we gave an extra concert later in the Spring, but anyway, from that time on I was the conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra.

"During the twenty-five years of its existence I have played most of the classics, including two Beethoven cycles, of which I am especially proud, and I have also introduced to the New York public many new works, among others the fifth and sixth symphonies of Tschaikowsky. The fifth symphony of that Russian composer I had played before he visited this country at my invitation in 1891.

"Two years later I encountered him again at Cambridge, where musicians of five countries were honored with degrees by that university. These were Tschaikowsky, Saint-Saëns, Grieg, Bruch, and Boïto. By good fortune I was placed next to the Russian at dinner, and we talked.

"'I am writing a symphony,' he said, 'which has an entirely original turn. The last movement is an adagio instead of an allegro, and it has a programme.'

"'A programme,' I said. 'What is it?'

"'That,' he answered, 'no one shall ever know.'

"He said that the symphony was in the hands of the printers, and that he would instruct them to send me a copy of it as soon as it could be engraved. The following Fall arrived the sad news of the death of Tschaikowsky, and one week later I received a copy of the score of what has since become known as the 'Symphonie Pathètique,' with a note from the publisher saying that the composer had asked him to send it to me. It was put into rehearsal at once, played in a short time, and at once made a sensational success, so great a success, in fact, that when it was repeated the following week the hall was crowded in spite of the fact that there was no soloist.

"Personally I do not believe that Tschaikowsky committed suicide or that this symphony foreshadowed that act. However, it is difficult to know a man of such complexities. In his biography one can read letters to his brother Modeste written from the Hotel Normandie, in New York, in which he said that he was sitting in his room in tears. Yet in the evening of the same day he would be a very gay member of a dinner party.

"One of my most cherished memories is the Summer I spent with von Bülow at Frankfort in 1889. Bülow had been a great friend of my father's, and on that basis I went to him, telling him that I wanted to study the Beethoven scores with him. He said he had never heard of a musician who was conducting an orchestra and who had appeared as conductor at an opera house coming to another musician for information and advice. He was wonderfully good to me in consequence. We went over all the Beethoven symphonies together, and also some of the scenes in the Wagner music dramas. It was through von Bülow that I met Brahms, and together we three went to the festival given by the Tonkünstler Society in Cologne.

"It was in 1882 that I went to Weimar to visit Liszt. Later in the year he took me to Baireuth, where I met Wagner and heard the first three performances of 'Parsifal.'"

Besides the two Tschaikowsky symphonies, other works which have received their first American performances at concerts of the Symphony Society of New York are d'Indy's symphony, "Jour d'été sur les Montagnes"; Elgar's symphony, César Franck's tone poem "Psyche," and performances in concert form of "Parsifal," "Samson et Dalila," and Tschaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin."

N. Y. SYMPHONY CONCERT.

L. Damrosch's "Festival Overture" Played with Moszkowski's Concerto.

The fifteenth Sunday afternoon concert of the New York Symphony Society yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall began with a performance of Leopold Damrosch's "Festival Overture," which has been played before this season at a memorial concert given in honor of Dr. Damrosch by the People's Choral Union at Carnegie Hall.

The main interest of yesterday's concert centred probably in Mrs. Zeisler's performance of Moszkowski's piano forte concerto. This pianist has played the work before in New York at a concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra about two years ago. It is a brilliant, if somewhat shallow, composition, to every note of which Mrs. Zeisler's skillful fingers give an added reason for existance. The programme also included Schubert's unfinished symphony and the prelude to "Die Meistersinger."

Last Volpe Symphony Concert.

Miss Tina Lerner was the piano soloist at the last subscription concert of the season, given by the Volpe Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. She played Grieg's A minor concerto. The programme also included Tschaikowsky's fifth symphony, which has been played many times this season by the various orchestral organizations; Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture, and Wagner's "Rienzi" overture.

"LAKME" AT THE MANHATTAN.

To be Sung Next Monday Night in Italian, Tetrazzini in Title Role.

Next Monday night, which will open the last week of the season at the Manhattan Opera House, Mr. Hammerstein will produce "Lakme" for the first time at that theatre. Mme. Tetrazzini will appear in the title rôle, Mr. McCormack will sing Gerald, Mr. Huberdeau Nilakantha, Miss Trentini and Miss Vicarino the two English girls, Miss Severina the governess, Mme. Duchene Malika, Mr. Crabbé Frederick, and Mr. Russo Sagi. The opera will be sung in Italian this season, but during the Summer Mme. Tetrazzini intends to study her rôle in French, so that the opera can be presented in its original tonque next season.

ZURO LEADS AT MANHATTAN.

Chorus Master Conducts His First Sunday Concert There.

Josiah Zuro, the chorus master of the Manhattan Opera House, had his first chance to conduct at the concert at that theatre last evening. He led the choir through songs by Brahms and Cornelius without orchestral accompaniment, and the women's chorus from the first act of "Samson et Dalila" and the soldier's chorus from "Herodiade" with orchestral accompaniment.

Ferruccio Busoni, the Italian pianist, again appeared at this concert, playing Liszt's Spanish rhapsody and some other shorter numbers. Miss Inez Jolivet, the French violinist, was a third feature. Others who appeared were Mmes. Duchene, Miranda, and Mazarin, and Messrs. Devries, Dufranne, and Gilibert.

LECTURES ON MUSIC.

Another new course of lectures on music has been arranged by the Board of Education. The subject will be "Composers and Music" and the lecturer Clarence De Vaux Royer. The course will be given on alternate Monday evenings at Public School 5, at 2,436 Webster Avenue, Fordham, beginning to-night with a lecture recital on the "Composers and Music of Italy."

This week special attention will be given to folk and national songs. There will be lectures on American patriotic songs, German folk songs, and Scottish music. The week's lectures are:

Monday—"Scottish Music," Mrs. Katherine Hand, illustrated by vocal and instrumental music, at Stuyvesant High School, Sixteenth Street, near First Avenue. "Edvard Grieg and Scandinavian Song," Miss Gurli I. Lennborn, illustrated by songs by Miss Lennborn and instrumental selections by Miss Charlotte Herman, at Public School 46, 156th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue. "Composers and Music of Italy," Clarence De Vaux Royer, illustrated by violin and piano selections, at Public School 5, 2,436 Webster Avenue, Fordham.

Tuesday—"Folk Song and Art Song," Miss Mari F. MacConnell, illustrated by vocal music by Miss Helen MacConnell, at Riverdale Hall, Riverdale Avenue and 260th Street.

Wednesday—"Patriotic Songs," Frederick Reddall, illustrated by songs, at Public School 27, Forty-second Street, east of Third Avenue. "Siegfried," Miss Annie K. Wilson, illustrated by piano from orchestral score, at Y. M. C. A. Hall, Lexington Avenue and Ninety-second Street.

Thursday—"Folk Songs of France," Mrs. Rollie B. Low, illustrated by folk songs in Brittany peasant costume, and piano accompaniment by Mr. Albert G. Crawford, at Public School 135, First Avenue and Fifty-first Street.

NEW SHUBERT PRIMA DONNA.

Marguerite Namara, a young American singer well known to music lovers under the name of Marguerite Banks, has been engaged by the Shuberts for the prima donna rôle in their production of "Madame Troubadour," by Felix Albini and Victor Herbert. Her appearance in this piece will be her operatic début in America.

Miss Namara was born in Cleveland, Ohio, but spent most of her early life in Los Angeles, Cal. She began to study music at an early age, under the tuition of her mother, who had been a singer and teacher. At the age of 18 she went to Milan and after a year of study she made her début in Genoa in a company presenting standard operas. Heard there by Henry Russell, when he was organizing his Boston opera company, she was engaged to come to America. After a year of coaching for a répertoire of operas in Boston she had a disagreement with Mr. Russell, leaving his company the day before the opening of the Boston opera.

Since then she has sung in a number of private concerts and once sang before President Taft. She was recently married to Frederick H. Toye, formerly connected with the management of the Boston Opera Company.

Cast for Hauptmann's "Hannele."

The complete cast of Gerhardt Hauptmann's "Hannele," which Mrs. Fiske will present at the Lyceum Theatre in the last two weeks of her engagement there, is as follows: Hannele, Mrs. Fiske; Gottwald, Holbrook Blinn; Sister Martha, Alice John; Spirit of Hannele's Mother, Virginia Klein; Tulpe, Florine Arnold; Hedwig, Mabel Reed; Pleschke, Sheldon Lewis; Hanke, R. W. Tucker; Seidel, Edward Mackay; Berger, Cyril Chadwick; Schmidt, T. N. Heffron; Doctor Wachler, Henry Stephenson; Mattern, Charles Riegel; the Angel of Death, Wilfred Buckland; First Angel, Merle Maddern; Second Angel, Veda McEvers; Third Angel, Helena Van Brugh; the Deaconess, Alice John, and the Village Tailor, Leo H. White.

Miss Sutton to Sing for Baroness.

Vida Sutton, a member of The New Theatre company, has received an invitation from the Baroness de Knoop of London to give a programme of English and Scotch ballads at a farewell reception to be given by the Baroness at the Hotel Savoy next Thursday afternoon. The Baroness has just completed a year's investigation of settlement work in this country.

GLAD MRS. MARKS WON.

Shakespeare Memorial Anxious to Interest Americans, Says Mr. Ward.

H. Snowden Ward, an Associate of the Shakespeare Memorial, who is in this country on a lecture tour, expressed gratification yesterday that an American woman, Mrs. Lionel S. Marks, of Cambridge, Mass., had won the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre prize of $1,500 by her play, "The Piper."

"There will be no jealousy whatever over the award of this prize to Mrs. Marks," said he, "since the Shakespeare Memorial is anxious to have all English-speaking people take a keen interest in the annual Shakespeare festival. This year a feature of the festival will be the production of 'The Piper,' under the direction of F. R. Benson of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre company at Stratford. Mr. Benson himself will probably play the title rôle.

"An effort is being made to have, in addition to the festival in April, which is too early to catch the American tourists, a series of entertainments at Stratford some time each Summer, which will draw Americans to Shakespeare's birthplace."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

William Morris, Incorporated, has offered a week's salary of $5,000 for the greatest novelty of any sort, to be presented at the American Music Hall during Easter week. Anything from a troupe of elephants to a company of stars from the legitimate stage will be considered.

About 300 members of the Scottish Societies of New York will attend the Alhambra Theatre on Monday night to see the Musical Gordon Highlanders. After the performance a reception will be given to the musicians by the societies.

J. Herbert Mack, President of the Columbia Amusement Company, will sail for England this week to arrange for the erection in London of a burlesque theatre on the lines of the new Columbia Theatre here.

A special performance of Gerhardt Hauptmann's drama, "Lonely Lives," will be given at the Hyperion Theatre, New Haven, on April 6, under the direction of the Yale Dramatic Association. The play will be repeated at the Hackett Theatre here on April 10, under the direction of Frank Lee Short and Julius Hopp.

FIRST SPRING DAY THRONGS THE PARKS

MANY NEW ANIMALS SHOWN

There was a hint of approaching Spring in the air yesterday which drew thousands to the parks in the afternoon. Not since the balmy days of last Fall had there been so many fresh air seekers in Central Park. All day the walks were thronged with Sunday strollers. And up in Bronx Park it was much the same. The skies were clear, with no touch of frost in the air. So perfect was the day that the crowds were loath to leave the parks even when the sun began to sink behind the Palisades.

The zoos at both Central and Bronx Park proved popular places for most of those who visited the city's breathing spots, and there was much that was new in both of them to interest the visitors. One of the latest arrivals at the Central Park Zoo which aroused interest yesterday was a polar bear which reached there Saturday and was put in the den with Jim, the three-year-old inmate, who for the last two months had been mourning the loss of his mate, Mary, who died of pneumonia around the first of the year. Jim, too, had a narrow escape from death, as the visitors learned yesterday by questioning Head Keeper Snyder.

Both Jim and his mate contracted heavy colds early in the Winter, and grew worse as the cold weather continued. When Mary died Jim's life was despaired of for several weeks, for, in addition to the pneumonia, the bear seemed to feel the loss of his mate keenly. But the careful nursing of Keeper Snyder and his assistants pulled Jim through.

Polar Bear Gets New Mate.

Soon after the death of Mary an order for another female polar bear was sent to Hamburg by the Central Park authorities. Upon her arrival Saturday Jim's new mate was put in the bear den on the hill near the old Arsenal Building, and the zoo keepers gathered around to see what sort of a reception the new arrival would get. Jim was not inclined to be friendly at first. The bears growled at each other all the afternoon, but did not come to blows.

Yesterday morning at feeding time they broke the ice. Snyder and his assistant, Bob Hurtin, approached the bear den, their arms laden with loaves of bread. Jim was taking his morning plunge, and his new mate was looking on from a perch on the ledge of rocks just over the cave. She clambered down when the loaves of bread began to fall upon the floor of the den. The keepers expected a fight, as Jim is usually very greedy, and often in the lifetime of his old mate would fight for the larger share of food.

But yesterday Jim seemed to have lost his old greedy ways. He allowed the new bear to have her share, and when the bread had disappeared they rubbed noses in a friendly way and curled up in the sun as though they had been lifelong comrades. And yesterday afternoon the visitors saw Jim was catching the nuts with his old-time skill and the new arrival was looking on as though she were trying to master the knack by observation. Whenever a peanut came her way the new bear ducked her head.

The three lion cubs, offspring of the Nubian lion Helen, were also a centre of attraction at Central Park. The little fellows are 7 months old and have but lately been weaned. They are confined in a cage by themselves, and all yesterday afternoon were romping about, apparently quite content to have a separate compartment. In a cage near by their mother watched them closely as though she feared some harm might befall the romping cubs. Their father, Leo, also in a near-by cage, kept his eyes centred on the little ones. About the only disinterested lions in the place were Rosie and Bismarck, grandparents of the cubs.

There are also two leopard cubs five months old, which were new to many in yesterday's crowd who had not visited the zoo since last Autumn. They, too, have been weaned in the Winter and have a cage to themselves. But the young leopards slept through the afternoon, unmindful of the crowds and only aroused themselves at feeding time.

Lambs Fed by Bottle.

Keeper Snyder is playing nurse these days to several lambs born in the sheepfold on Friday and Saturday. Three of the lambs were deserted by their mothers, and Keeper Snyder has to feed them from a bottle three times a day. Some of the keeper's old friends were admitted to his office in the afternoon to see the feeding. A bottle with a rubber nipple is used, and the milk is heated.

Up in the Bronx Park Zoo many of the animals which had stayed in Winter quarters since the Fall were outdoors yesterday. The elephants were allowed a breath of fresh air, and seemed to enjoy it. Most of the shaggy-haired animals, too, were roaming about their Summer corrals. Many new specimens have been added to the Bronx Park collection since last year and were new to the visitors yesterday. Among them is a monkey from South America, which arrived last week and which was chattering with the best of them yesterday in the monkey house. The new monkey has a larger vocabulary than even Baldy, the oldest resident of the monkey house, so the keepers say.

One of the Bronx Park Zoo timber wolves was seen for the last time there yesterday. To-day he will join a traveling circus, and will be billed as "the dancing wolf." The wolf is apparently crazy. Several months ago it developed the habit of running around in circles, halting now and then to throw himself into the air, and upon alighting continuing the interrupted circular trot.

Curator Raymond Ditmars was busy yesterday fixing up new paraphernalia for his animal and reptile circus. He is billed to appear with his circus in Elizabeth, N. J., for the fifth time, next Thursday. Mr. Ditmars will exhibit his snakes and other performing reptiles before Public School 1 of that town.

Brooklyn Widow Sues Ex-Alderman Myers for Breach of Promise.

Friends of ex-Alderman Samuel R. Myers, an old-time Republican politician in Brooklyn, were surprised to learn yesterday that he had been made defendant in a breach of promise suit brought by Mrs. Charlotte L. Law. She is in the real estate business at 1,025 Halsey Street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Law says that Myers promised to marry her and named a date in 1906. Because of his failure to keep his alleged promise she wants $30,000 damages. She contends that Mr. Myers is worth between $200,000 and $300,000. To prove this she says she has several hundred letters and poems written her by him. Mrs. Law says she is 48. She has been a widow nineteen years.

Mr. Myers is now 79. He was married to a Massachusetts school teacher in 1906, and lives at 818 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn. He was a widower five years at the time he is accused of courting Mrs. Law. In his defense filed by his counsel, John S. Griffith, he denies that he promised to marry Mrs. Law. He admits he met her in 1901 and often since then, but that his meetings with her were on business matters only.

NEW YORK GIRL A SUICIDE.

McKEESPORT, Penn., March 13. — It was learned here to-day that a young woman who committed suicide yesterday was Miss Selma Ruth Kaufman of 602 West 137th Street, New York. She reached McKeesport yesterday morning, went to the place of business of her brother, Asher Kaufman, and later took rooms in the Hotel White. She killed herself by making a rope of her silk stockings and hanging herself to the shower bath. She left this note:

> The fight is too hard. Good-bye and God bless all who have been kind. My trunks are at the Twenty-third Street station, New York City. I entreat forgiveness, as I hope to be forgiven and have another chance.

This note was pinned to her parasol. On the reverse side were directions to give the parasol to Miss B. H. Burwell of Washington, D. C., for kindness.

Col. John I. Rogers.

PHILADELPHIA, March 13.—Col. John I. Rogers, who for years took a prominent part in the political, legal, and sporting circles in this city, died suddenly to-day at Denver, Col. He had been enjoying excellent health and had been in the West on a business trip. His death was caused by heart disease superinduced by overexertion in tramping through the snow-covered hills. The funeral will be held from his home at Wyncote.

Col. Rogers was probably best known for his interest for many years in the local baseball field. He was in co-partnership with A. J. Reach, the owner of the Philadelphia National League Club and was its President. He sold the franchise to a syndicate and the transfer of the grounds at Fifteenth and Hutingdon Streets to Mrs. Charles P. Taft marked the passing of Col. Rogers in the baseball life of this city.

Col. Rogers was born in this city sixty-six years ago, and was admited to the bar in 1865. He took an active part in the military affairs of the city and State. As a member of the City Troop he participated in the quelling of the Pittsburg riots. He also served as the poet of the troop, writing an original ode for its centennial celebration. Gov. Pattison appointed him Judge Advocate General of the National Guard of Pennsylvania with the rank of Colonel. He was an ardent Democrat.

Timothy Harrington.

LONDON, March 13.—Timothy Harrington, member of the House of Commons for Harbour Division of Dublin, died today.

Timothy Harrington was born in 1851. He was graduated from Trinity College, Dublin. He was elected Lord Mayor of Dublin in 1901, and was re-elected in 1902 and 1903. He was formerly proprietor of United Ireland, and The Kerry Sentinel. He was at one time Secretary of the Irish National League and a Parnellite, but in 1897 he declared himself an Independent Nationalist.

PRESIDENT ATTENDS LAUGHLIN FUNERAL

Plainly Shows Grief Over the Tragic Death of Mrs. Taft's Brother-in-Law.

SIMPLE SERVICE IS HELD

PITTSBURG, March 13.—President Taft spent a sad day in Pittsburg to-day, having come for the funeral of Thomas McK. Laughlin, brother-in-law of Mrs. Taft, who killed himself early Friday morning. Mr. Taft and Mr. Laughlin had been deeply attached to each other. After attending the funeral services and remaining for a time with the mourning family, the President left this evening for Washington, where he will arrive at 8:25 o'clock to-morrow morning.

When the President alighted from his tdain it could be seen that he was deeply affected by the circumstances that had brought him here. Ten months ago he visited the Laughlin home here and had one of the pleasantest days of his life at their country home, where an informal reception was given on the lawn. Mr. Taft, his wife's sister, Mrs. Louis More of Cincinnati, Capt. Archibald Butt and the Secret Service men arrived at the East Liberty Street station in the private car Olympia at 8:51 o'clock this morning. A strong force of police was there, holding in check the throng that had gathered.

Mr. Taft, with pale, grave face and marked preoccupation, walked alone almost the length of the platform, apparently paying no attention to the others in the party or to the people who raised their hats as he passed. His expression brought forth many sympathetic remarks and even tears from the crowd. Half way along the platform he seemed to realize that others were with him and stopped until Mrs. More joined him. The party entered an automobile, which took them to Woodland Road and the Laughlin home.

The funeral services were held at the residence at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Only the family and the close friends of the Laughlins were present, including two sisters of Mrs. Taft, Mrs. More and Mrs. Charles Anderson of Cincinnati. Judge John W. Herron of Cincinnati, father of Mrs. Laughlin and Mrs. Taft, was unable to be present because of ill-health.

Mrs. Taft sent a large wreath of flowers from the White House conservatories. Irwin B. Laughlin, brother of Thomas Laughlin, Secretary of the American Embassy at Berlin, cabled a message of condolence. Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and friends from various sections of the country sent flowers and messages of sympathy.

The Rev. Maitland Alexander, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, conducted the brief ceremonies at the house and at the grave, where the mourning party was sheltered from the eyes of onlookers by a white tent stretched above the family burial place. The day was one of dismal rain.

Following the funeral the President, accompanied by Capt. Archibald W. Butt, his military aid, went for a long automobile ride through the rain. Upon his return Mr. Taft looked tired. He remained at the Laughlin home until 8 o'clock, at which time he boarded the Olympia for Washington.

FRED TENNEY IN REMINISCENT MOOD

By FRED TENNEY,

MARLIN, Texas, March 13.—This has been a beautiful, warm day. No work has been required for those left behind on the Dallas trip.

While enjoying this rest my mind went back over the years, and I wondered if perhaps I couldn't interest some of the fans with a little of the baseball that has gone.

In the big leagues one plays so many games of varied character that the details of most are crowded out. The only one that remain intact are the great crucial games—the ones that the whole baseball world is eagerly watching; the ones which to win or lose mean so much to the players and clubs involved; the ones which if won cause the victors to be regarded as heroes; if lost, the satisfaction of having made a game fight.

It has been my fortune to be actually in perhaps the two greatest struggles which ever took place for a baseball championship. The one that stands out more prominently in my mind is the fight Baltimore and Boston made for the championship in 1897. They were two great teams, every man in either team being the bright particular star of his position. A contest between them was worth going miles to see. That was when Collins and McGraw, Jennings and Long, Hamilton and Keeler, Robinson and Bergen, vied with one another in an endeavor to achieve even the impossible. They were probably the two greatest and fastest aggregations ever gotten together, led by the then famous Hanlon and the quiet Selee, respectively.

The teams had run neck and neck for six weeks until, with only one week to go, they were to come together at Baltimore for a series of three games.

Interest was at fever heat, not only in the home cities, but throughout the country. Every leading newspaper published bulletins; the streets around their bulletin boards were blocked daily. Everybody was cheering for his favorite club.

Boston won the first game, mainly through a wonderful catch made by Herman Long, the bases being full at the time, with two out. The score was 6 to 4. By winning Boston went into the lead, displacing Baltimore, which had been in the van by the narrow margin of one-one-thousandth of a point. The next day Baltimore turned the tables, winning out 6 to 3, thereby regaining the lead by the same narrow margin. Then came the crucial contest. It was on the Jewish New Year's, and practically a holiday in Baltimore. The ball park was packed. The fence was broken down, the press being so great. Every available inch was occupied. The players had to sit along the base lines in place of the benches.

Old reliable Kid Nichols was on the firing line for Boston, while Joe Corbett, brother of the former heavyweight champion, was depended on by Hanlon. Boston broke away in the lead, and the score up to the seventh inning was 8 to 5 in favor of the "Beaneaters." In that seventh Boston gave the greatest exhibition of consecutive hitting ever seen in such a contest. Eleven safe hits were recorded for a total of nine earned runs. It speaks volumes for the playing ability of the Baltimores that they didn't falter under the heavy bombardment, but whenever a chance was offered it was accepted. This inning settled the game and the race for that season. The handicap was too great to be overcome, though Baltimore made a great effort, adding five runs to its total, while Boston gained two more, making the final result 19 to 10. That struggle remains green in my memory, and always will, probably because I was on the winning side.

GIANTS' CLOSE FIGHT.

Dallas Gives New York Hard Tussle—Bell Braces at Finish.

DALLAS, Texas, March 13.—Dallas gave the Giants a close fight this afternoon, but the game finally resulted 6 to 5 in favor of New York. The strong finish made by Dallas was due to the pitching of Bell, who succeeded Raymond in the fifth inning. The young left-hander took it easy on account of New York's big lead, and he was putting the ball right over the middle of the plate. Suddenly the Dallas hitters began to rap the ball, and a warning shout from McGraw was needed to make Bell begin using his curve. In the last half of the ninth he put them away in one, two, three order.

Raymond was in good form during his five innings. For the first time this season he had his spit ball curve working beautifully, and when he resorted to its use there was no chance for the minor leaguers. Raymond created a lot of fun by stealing both second and third in the third inning. He was just starting on an attempt to steal home when Larry Doyle drove out a single and scored him. He was prouder of that steal of third than he would be of winning a dozen games in the Summer.

The start-off of the Giants was like regular midseason ball. Devore began with a bunt that he beat out, and Doyle sent him to third with a single. Murray followed suit with another single, and Devore came home. The Giants attempted many forms of base stealing, and that is largely responsible for the small score. They could have made twice as many runs if there had been any danger of Dallas winning. The score:

READY FOR SECOND GAME.

Yankees Preparing Another Contest—President Farrell Arrives.

ATHENS, Ga., March 13.—The regulars and Yannigans of the Highlanders, in training here, will battle to-morrow afternoon, in the second game of their series, under the eye of President Frank J. Farrell. The club owner arrived late yesterday afternoon from New York. Tom Foley of New York and A. S. Haland of Boston accompanied him.

The candidates will make their first appearance on the new grounds which have been especially prepared for them in a practice skit to-morrow morning. Hal Chase and a number of the players went out there to-day on a tour of inspection. The Captain was not greatly impressed by the outlook. He says the soil is treacherous—soft in some places and hard in others, as the result of a combination of sand and red clay. The recent rains may have had something to do with this. The field has been made as smooth as possible. It is a spacious park, and will at least allow every one to work out without danger of being hit by batted or thrown balls. The campus grounds are uneven and gravelly and hurt the players' feet. Jimmy Austin and Eddie Foster both have bruised their pedals on the hard-baked gravel.

Now that the players will be able to slide, Manager Stallings will devote some attention to this department of the game. Not a player has yet been allowed to hit the dirt, because of the stony surface of the college grounds. The boys will take things easy in practice until they get accustomed to their new field. Every one is in fine physical condition, and an uncertain field is generally the cause of injured ankles, legs, and knees.

Brooklyn Gets Sweet Revenge.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 13.—There was a happy lot of ball players in the Brooklyn camp to-night. The Dodgers got full revenge on the All-Americans for their defeat of last Sunday, beating a strong picked team by a score of 7 to 3. Young and Criger, the once famous Boston battery, had no terrors for Dahlen's outfit. For the Dodgers Schneiberg was the garlanded hero. The big twirler from Milwaukee allowed the American Leaguers only two hits in five innings, and would have shut them out but for a fumble by McMillan and a wild pitch. Bell was not so effective, but kept the score down.

Dahlen to-day wired Berger to report at Chattanooga, Boston still refusing to waive on the pitcher. Ebbets wanted to ship him to Rochester. Dahlen may have to keep him. Score by innings:

All-Americans	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	1	3	9	6

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 13.—In the best-played game of the exhibition series here the Giants to-day blanked the Panthers 10 to 0. The New Yorkers made four home runs in the first two innings and scored eight runs. In the first inning Shafer hit the ball over the fence and in the second Fletcher, Herzog, and Spencer did likewise. Meyers and Dickson each made three-baggers. Dickson pitched the first six innings so well that Fort Worth got but one hit off him. Score:

Fordham Squad Shows Development.

One week of outdoor practice shows the Fordham baseball squad stronger than even the most sanguine judges had hoped. The men have been playing with a dash that has pleased Head Coach Coffey. The apparent hopeless tas kof filling in the vacancies left by Coffey and E. Schress has been greatly lightened by the good showing of McCarthy of football fame, White, '10; Healy, '12, and Sharkey, '13, during the past week. Scarcely a week is left to get ready for the opening game at Washington with Georgetown on March 23.

ARMY CADETS GET ATHLETIC PRIZES

WEST POINT, N. Y., March 13.—On Saturday night under the auspices of the Army Athletic Council the cadets held their sixteenth annual indoor meet. It was midnight before all the events were completed, and the 1910 class declared the winner of the meet, with 1912 second. The gymnasium work of Cadet José Calvo of Costa Rica was as skillful a performance as has been seen here in some time, and he was awarded the Pierce Currier Foster Cup for the best all around gymnast. Cadet E. W. Burr, 1910, was awarded the sword presented by the Athletic Council to the cadet who during his career at West Point has personally excelled in general athletics. The Edgerton sabre, gift of Mrs. William Todd Helmuth of New York City, to the outgoing football Captain, in memory of Col. Wright P. Edgerton, former Professor of Mathematics and for many years the President of the Army Athletic Association, was presented to Cadet D. D. Pullen, Captain of the 1909 football team.

The letter "A" was presented to Cadets McNeal, 1911; Surles, 1911; Ulla, 1912; Whiteside, 1912; Lyman, 1913, for baseball. The football "A" was given Hicks, 1911; Browne, C. J., 1912; Arnold, 1912; Purnell, 1913, and for fencing to Dargue, 1911; Strong, 1910.

In appreciation of the exceptional record of the basket ball team this year the Athletic Council voted to award the letter "A" to those members of the team who have played in three-fourths of the games during the season in recognition of their efforts in establishing a record which in the opinion of the council was not surpassed by any other team playing this year. The men receiving the basket ball "A" were Milliken, 1910; Jones, 1910; Conard, 1911; Surles, 1911; McKinney, 1911; Arnold, 1912; Copthorne, 1913.

Gold souvenir football watch charms were presented to Cadets Pullen, Chamberlin, Byrne, Fowler, and Carberry, all of the class of 1910. Gold souvenir baseball watch charms were presented to Cadets McCoach, Haverkamp, and Byars of the 1910 class, and a fencing souvenir was also presented to Cadets Sohlberg and Cocroft of the class of 1910.

Middies' Hard Rowing Schedule.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 13.—With the prospect of five 'Varsity races within five weeks the Naval Academy crew has a severe task before it. The races definitely scheduled are Harvard, April 23; Columbia, May 7; Georgetown, May 14, and Syracuse, May 21. The University of Pennsylvania has declined to row on April 30 and has asked for a date in May. The Academy management will ask Georgetown to row on April 30, and will offer May 14 to Pennsylvania should the Washingtonians agree.

Canadian Hockey Game Here.

Some real Canadian hockey will be played to-morrow night when the Ottawa team of Ottawa and the Wanderers of Montreal begin a two nights' series of games at the St. Nicholas Rink for a purse of $1,500 to go to the team making the highest score of goals in two nights' play, with the additional incentive to the winner of playing the Renfrew team later in the week for a purse of $1,000. The Wanderers succeeded in winning the Lord Stanley Cup, which represents the professional teams of pionship of Canada, and is just as eagerly contested for by the various professional teams of Canada, where hockey is the national pastime, as the National League baseball emblem is in this country. In the championship tournament participated in by teams from Winnipeg, Cobalt, Haileybury, Renfrew, Ottawa, and Montreal the final struggle narrowed down to a tie game between the Wanderers and Ottawas, the two teams scheduled to play here to-morrow, and so keen was the interest taken in the outcome of the game that 8,000 spectators, many of them coming from the most remote parts of the Dominion, crowded into the arena at Ottawa on the eventful night. The battle was fought on wet ice, on which the Wanderers were better, stronger, and more accurate than Ottawa. It was clean-cut, decisive, and without a question as to the superiority of the victors. With the facilities at the local rink for giving the hockey players perfect ice, Ottawa hopes to reverse the decision and return to Canada with some consolation for the loss of the much prized championship emblem by turning the tables upon their conquerors.

RELAY RECORD IN DANGER.

The one-mile relay between the New York Athletic Club and the Boston Athletic Association, to be run at Madison Square Garden to-morrow night, on the occasion of the annual games of the Mercury Foot organization, promises to be a real hummer.

E. E. Nelson of the Boston A. A., who will run the last relay in the relay race, will have Harry Gissing as his opposing anchor man. That last quarter is going to be a hummer, for Nelson is in the very best of shape, having done 0:49 flat twice since last Wednesday, and his three teammates have each done better than 0:50 2-5.

Gissing has been in retirement during the past ten days, getting into shape for this event and two other little affairs that he has on for next Tuesday night. He wants to carry off the honors in the seventy-yard dash if he can, and expects to make everybody hustle in the 800-yard handicap. Gissing is, in other words, going in for the short distances, as well as his old favorites of 600, 880, and 1,000 yards, and will work up to the mile, too, so that he may, in time and with training, be to the present generation of runners what Lon E. Myers was to the athletes of three and two decades ago.

The indoor record for the mile relay with four-man teams is extremely likely to get its bumps. The present record of 3:20 3-5 will have an awful assault to withstand with the New York Athletic Club quartet, composed of Egan, Bacon, McEntee, and Gissing, and the Boston Athletic Association four, made up of Gram, Prout, Bradley, and Nelson, trying to efface it. Coupled with this, the Mercury Foot team has the sting of a recent defeat at the hands of the Boston outfit to wipe out. If the trick can be accomplished, the Boston Athletic Association's team will go back unhappy and the old record will have suffered a severe relapse.

OLDFIELD'S NEW RECORD.

Auto Pilot Drives Benz Car One Mile in 27 2-5 Seconds.

DAYTONA, Fla., March 13.—Barney Oldfield, with his 200 horse power Benz, drove a mile in 0:27 2-5, which is four-fifths of a second better than the world's record.

In the exhibition events Tuesday, which will supplant the Oldfield-De Palma match, Oldfield has consented to go for the one and two mile world's records. All records he makes then will be official. The regular speed carnival dates, with the original programme, will begin March 22 and continue for two days.

REDRAW FOR TENNIS TITLE.

Omission of Teams in Indoor Championship Makes Move Necessary.

For the first time in the history of National championship lawn tennis tournaments in this country a redrawing of the competitors was made yesterday in strict conformity with the rules. It was made necessary in the doubles event of the women's championship which began Saturday upon the courts of the Seventh Regiment Armory because of Referee William B. Cragin, Jr., learning that pairs properly entered had been omitted from the original drafting for places.

While the redraw made yesterday marks the first time that this has been done in a National tournament, it is not the first time that errors of omitting duly entered competitors have been made. Both the singles and doubles of the women's championship will be advanced to the semi-final rounds to-day, the matches beginning at 10 o'clock this morning and continuing throughout the day. The new drawing of the doubles follows:

Women's National Indoor Championship Doubles; (First Round—Byes.)—Mrs. A. H. Oeder and Mrs. Albert Humphries vs. Mrs. Samuel Fullerton Weaver and Mrs. L. Millens Burt.

First Round.—Mrs. C. W. Remsen and Miss Edith Handy vs. Miss Elizabeth H. Moore and Miss Erma Marcus, Miss Verdi and Miss Robinson-Smith vs. Miss Fanny L. Fish and Miss Alice M. Fish, Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clara Kuttroff vs. Mrs. G. B. De Garsdorff and Mrs. F. W. Jenkins, Miss Edith M. Bagg and Miss M. Thomas vs. Miss Katherine McCook and Miss Evelyn Witherbee.

First Round—Byes.—Miss Gertrude Dellatorre and Miss Anne Hamilton vs. Mrs. Frederick G. Schmitz and Miss G. Pickhardt.

W. Meyer of the Italian Athletic Club scored a victory yesterday in the weekly invitation cross-country run of the Glencoe Athletic Club, 126th Street and Second Avenue, after a close finish with J. Donohue of the Elnido Athletic Club. The smallest field that has competed in the weekly event this season went over the course, and of the twenty-four who were on the mark when the gun was fired twenty-one covered the four-mile distance.

At the start H. Norman of the Morningside Athletic Club went to the front and maintained his advantage for about a mile, when Panzeri, another of the Italian club athletes, took a turn at the pacemaking. At the turn for home Meyer came up strong, closely followed by Donohue, and the two fought it out all the way to the tape, Meyer winning by a few yards in 20:10. The order of finish was:

Peerless

THE supreme test of automobile perfection is the "personality" of the car—that aggregate impression of its character which survives all analysis. To attain that satisfying charm is the end and aim of all well-thought-out details, mechanical arrangements and refined materials.

It is the perfectly harmonized expression of these appointments that makes you feel, in the presence of the car, that something which pervades a masterpiece. Of this quality in the Peerless the car alone can adequately speak.

Many people have an erroneous impression of a "liquor cure." They fear a "hospital," with burly attendants, isolation, possible rough handling, and unpleasant notoriety. They find here, instead, comfortable surroundings, trained nursing, expert medical attention, and the same privacy they would have in their own homes. They can, if they wish, keep in constant personal touch with friends or business. A call at our Institute will verify these statements and involve for the inquirer no obligation and no publicity.

"The rush of tourists from America has begun. The Savoy is one of London's big hotels which is full. Never so early in the season has there been such a demand for suites of apartments. Hours before the 'Carmania' was in sight of land Wireless Telegrams were arriving at the booking offices of the Savoy, and soon every free suite was ready for its occupants."

—From "The New York Herald" (Paris.)

The comforts and luxury of the SAVOY HOTEL, its cuisine and service, combined with the most moderate charges, place it absolutely in the front rank of all hotels in Europe. The beautiful suites, with bathrooms attached, overlooking the River Thames and Embankment Gardens, away from the noise and bustle of street traffic, although in the centre of London, are greatly appreciated by all American travellers.

BLAMES THE PARENTS FOR CHILDHOOD EVILS

BEER FED TO MANY BABIES

Instead of Milk—Such Treatment Denounced as Race Murder Before the Current Events Class.

Dr. T. A. Alexander MacNichol of 101 West Sixty-sixth Street gave a lecture yesterday before the Current Events Class in the Calvary Baptist Church, in Fifty-seventh Street, in which he asserted that many New York children are being martyred by their parents. The subject of his discourse was "Child Martyrs of the Twentieth Century."

Dr. MacNichol, besides being a physician, has been a preacher, but his license was not renewed on Saturday at the fourth quarterly conference of the Memorial Methodist Church of White Plains, as the result of charges following a recent meeting in which Dr. MacNichol said pointed things about the moral condition of White Plains children.

Yesterday Dr. MacNichol spoke of four kinds of martyrdom which he declared present-day New York children suffer. Many ignorant parents, he said, violated all the rules of heredity, food, and training, and their progeny suffered in consequence.

"I have known plenty of mothers," he said, "who regularly feed their children beer through their nursing bottles and otherwise. Many children are martyred through their parents being victims of violent passions. Their children inherit these evil tendencies. Through their own indulgence in drink and vice generally their children are born with diseased and enfeebled bodies and minds."

Dr. MacNichol said he had been making some experiments along these lines with New York families. Taking a group of ten families addicted to drink, he said, he had discovered that 80 per cent. of their children were poor pupils with weak minds and morals, as against 17 per cent. of the children of the same number of parents who did not indulge in alcohol.

"What the country, and particularly New York, is suffering from," declared Dr. MacNichol, "is not race suicide, but race murder. Parents who allow their children to inherit evil tendencies through their own ignorant and criminal manner of living are nothing more nor less than murderers."

FAMOUS MISSIONARY ARRIVES.

Father Power, S. J., Temperance Advocate, to Take Month's Rest Here.

The most striking figure on the Anchor Line steamship California, in from Glasgow yesterday, and whose personality made itself felt in steerage as well as in cabin, was the Rev. Michael Power, a Jesuit missionary, towering nearly 7 feet in height. He was under orders from his Superior to take a month's rest in New York before returning to his work in Edinburgh. In speaking of his work Father Power said:

"I have been doing missionary work in England, Ireland, and Scotland for the past twenty years, and success has, I believe, followed my efforts. My fight has been against alcohol and Socialism. Seven years ago I secured in Edinburgh the right to preach in the streets. It was the first time since the Reformation that such a thing had been attempted. I persevered, however, and succeeded in holding my open-air services for nearly three years. Then the rioting became so severe that I was practically driven from the streets and was compelled to abandon my street work four years ago. I was ordered recently to take the trip to America and remain for a month to recuperate."

When asked if he expected to deliver any sermons in New York he replied:

"No. I am ordered here to rest, and, although I shall be here during the closing weeks of the Lenten season, I am ordered not to preach, and—much as I regret it—shall be obliged to remain absolutely quiet, in order that I may go on with my work on my return, a month hence. In the meantime I shall complete two sermons on temperance on which I am at work, and expect to obtain some material here. While here I shall be a guest of the Rev. Father Hearn at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, on Park Avenue at Eighty-fourth Street."

Other passengers on the California were John Peattie, Robert Rae, Albert Coulter, W. Alexander and family, John Ross, and Thomas McCrea.

DR. HUNTINGTON'S SUCCESSOR

Rev. Dr. Kinsolving, Who Preached at Grace Church Yesterday, Mentioned.

It was said at Grace Episcopal Church, Broadway and Tenth Street, after the morning service yesterday, that the preacher of the day, the Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving of Baltimore, is being considered as successor of the late Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington of that famous parish.

Several others are under consideration, among them the Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann of Trinity Church, Boston, and the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Slattery of Springfield. The Rev. Dr. Kinsolving, who preached yesterday, has two brothers who are Bishops in the Episcopal Church. He was for several years rector of Christ Church, Brooklyn.

Federation of Church Clubs Service.

The yearly service of the Federation of Church Clubs in the City of New York was held yesterday afternoon at Grace Church. Addresses were made by Bishop Cameron Mann of North Dakota, who spoke on "The Call to Conscience"; Dr. William Jay Schieffelin, Chairman of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, who spoke on the "Call to the Will," and the Rev. Karl Reilland, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Yonkers, who spoke on the "Call to the Heart."

LUMBER-JACK GROUND TO PULP

SARANAC LAKE, March 13.—Earle Velloine, a French Canadian lumber-jack, employed in a camp on the Wilmington side of White Face Mountain, met death to-day in a log slide. He was literally ground to pulp by the rolling timbers, among which he was caught.

Velloine was working on the lower side of the skidway, which was filled with logs. A small snowslide, due to soft weather, occurred above the skids, and struck the logs, starting them on the roll. Velloine heard and saw his danger, but could not escape the path of the timbers. His body was taken from the mass seventy feet below where he was struck.

Two months ago Velloine's brother was killed in the same vicinity by a fall from a log pit.

Miss Forbes-Robertson Says That English Stage Women Are Suffragettes.

The Equality League of Self-Supporting Women, founded by Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, gave a tea yesterday afternoon at its headquarters, 43 East Twenty-second Street, in honor of Miss Forbes-Robertson, who talked on "How Actresses Have Helped Woman Suffrage."

Miss Forbes-Robertson said that most of the leading women on the stage in England were in favor of voting. They had even taken one of the largest theatres in London to produce a pageant showing the part their sex had played in the history of the country. She went on to say that the same interest could be aroused in New York.

Burglars made a rich haul from the house of Israel G. Hammerschlag, a dealer in bakers' supplies, at 146 Huron Street, Greenpoint. In the rear of his dwelling is a large storehouse. For many years he kept a 300-pound safe in the kitchen of his home. On Friday night he placed $2,300 in the safe, and after making sure that the premises were securely locked up for the night, he and his wife retired.

During the night thieves forced an entrance and carried the safe into the storehouse, where holes were drilled in the bottom and the safe blown apart. The robbery was discovered Saturday morning and two dogs which were kept in the storehouse were found drugged.

Before exploding the safe the robbers muffled it with an old blanket. In the yard the police found a steel drill. It is thought the thieves reached the storehouse yard through a tenement house in India Street.

DESPONDENT, TAKES HIS LIFE.

Mrs. Eugenie Mendoza, who runs the boarding house at 290 Windsor Place, Brooklyn, smelled gas escaping from the door of the room occupied by Francis Viller yesterday morning, and had the door broken open. She found him lying on the bed dead. Two jets were discharging gas at full strength.

Mrs. Mendoza informed the detectives of the Fifth Avenue (Brooklyn) Station that Viller had come to this country from Spain, and that he had told her he was of a noble family in that country. He expected to make a fortune when he first came, said his landlady, but after a while his expectations in that respect went down. He grew dejected. He was 35 years old, and was employed in a cigar store.

Trenton to Have a Noiseless Fourth.

TRENTON, N. J., March 13.—Trenton is to have her first sane and safe Fourth of July this year, fireworks, fire crackers, and all sorts of combustibles having been outlawed by city ordinance. The idea is to have an old-fashioned Fourth without the fire crackers.

LONDON — PARIS — HAMBURG
S. S. DEUTSCHLAND is still one of the swiftest twin-screw steamships crossing the Atlantic, her record for a voyage from New York to Plymouth being 5 days, 7 hours and 38 minutes. Short passages are therefore assured to her passengers and—what is of equal importance—they will not be obliged to forego any single item of comfort or luxury. The Deutschland's saloons are beautifully furnished, her promenade decks are ample, and her staterooms are cosey, attractive and restful. The a la carte dining room service at all meals is another feature that will appeal strongly to the discriminating traveller. Special sailings of the Deutschland from New York are scheduled for MAY 28 and JULY 2, for both of which excellent accommodations are still available.

ROAD DRIVERS OPEN SPEEDWAY BRUSHES

The Speedway was informally opened for the season yesterday morning by a big turnout of road drivers. Weather conditions were perfect, and the footing could not have been better, yet there was little brushing and none was expected for the reason that yesterday was the first time since last Fall, fast steppers have had a chance to jog over an earth track. As a rule Speedway brushes are not started until Easter Sunday, and as there are two weeks yet, trotters and pacers will have time to be prepared for the formal opening.

One of the first arrivals was Joseph F. Gibbons, President of the Road Drivers' Association, who was behind his cup winner, Claro, 2:11¼, which secured his mark last season by winning a $1,000 stake. He looked better than ever, and hitched to a road cart stepped quite fast for this early in the year.

There were several out yesterday that belonged to the "unknown" class, but the name of only one could be found out. It was a good going brown mare named Ella Todd, which took a mark last season of 2:23¾, and was driven by B. Arenson, who drives Hylie Bird and several others. Driven by her owner the newcomer won two straight brushes from her stablemate, Hylie Bird, driven by William Mathis of Brooklyn, and when drivers were changed for the third, the result was the same. These were the only regular brushes of the day. Minnie Albert, 2:13¾, looked in fine shape, and ready for a spin or two, but her owner, S. Wolf, held her down to a jog until she is ready for fast work.

All of the well-known Speedway trotters and pacers that were out yesterday look in fine condition, having apparently wintered well. James A. Murphy was out with his trotter, Kim, 2:13¾. A. B. Clarke drove his favorite Joe Jap to a two-man wagon. Earl B., driven by his owner, P. Kennedy, looked much heavier than last year. Thomas G. Hinds drove the trotter Ismalian, 2:21½, leaving the other members of his matinée string in the stable. A. B. McGaffney's fast pacer, Sadie Mack, was surely ready for any kind of a fight, as is also her owner at all times, but none could be found willing to accept the open challenge.

Fred Deitz's favorite trotter, Fashion, was out with two men in the wagon. The big pacer Americus, is now in new hands, and was driven yesterday by W. Kenn. Philip Heiperhuesen was out with Lemon Girl. Otting brothers, Leo and Max, alternately drove Nashville.

EIGHT STARTERS IN RACE.

Fast Men Will Compete in To-night's Twenty-Mile Run in Garden.

The second long-distance professional foot race of the season at Madison Square Garden will take place to-night when eight long-distance men will meet in a twenty-mile event. The starters will be Fred Meadows of Canada, who won the fifteen-mile contest at the Garden last month in runaway style; Thurs Johansen, the Swedish youngster who carried off the recent Marathon race at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory in record-breaking time; Gusta Ljungstrom, a stable mate of Johanson; Paul Acoose, the Canadian Indian, who has victories over Shrubb and Longboat to his credit; Fortunata Zantl, winner of fifteen distance events last lear, two of which were victories over Dorando; Frank Clarke, a sturdy Irishman, who was only beaten a few yards this year in the best time ever made in an outdoor Marathon; Jim Crowley, the ex-Irish-American Athletic Club runner, who hung up the best time ever made for twenty miles indoors in the Marathon race which Johanson won, and Percy Sellen, the fleet-footed Canadian, who has victories over St. Yves, Shrubb, and Longboat to his credit.

The race will be run on a track ten laps to the mile. A five-mile handicap will precede the big event, among the starters being Muller, Raines, Cohn, Lee, Hallen, Spring, Reilly, and Benfer. The handicap will be started at 8:30 sharp and the twenty-mile race at 9:15.

SPORTING NEWS IN BRIEF.

At a meeting of borough delegates of the Schoolmen's Athletic Club, held at 2,650 Broadway, Friday, the President of the organization appointed J. Bassette Captain of the baseball team, B. Shapiro Captain of the basket ball team, Charles O'Hagen Captain of the bowling team, J. Holman Captain of the soccer team, Maurice Rogalin Captain of the track team, and Ingo Hartman Captain of the tennis team.

With some of the fastest skaters in the country entered in the various events the series for the Eastern championship of the National Roller Skating Association, which starts to-night at the Metropolitan Roller Rink, Broadway and Fifty-second Street, with a one-mile race, promises to result in a number of record-breaking races.

The Hamilton Institute A. A. holds its annual indoor scholastic meet Saturday afternoon, April 9, at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory. A good list of events is presented, among which are a 200-yard dash, a 440-yard run, a half-mile high school relay, and a mile intercollege relay, open to Columbia, Fordham, College of City of New York, and Pratt Institute.

The first aeronautic dinner of the Long Island Automobile Club will be held Friday evening at the clubhouse, 920 Union Street, Brooklyn. W. R. Kimball will deliver a lecture on "The Origin and Development of Aeration," which will be illustrated by moving pictures.

William H. Poole, catcher last season on the York Tri-State League team, has been sold to the Troy Club of the New York State League. Poole was Captain and field manager of the team under "Doc" Reisling, and after Reisling went to Washington he became the manager.

The Clubhouse Committee of the Road Drivers' Association has secured suitable meeting rooms and will make its report at the next meeting of the association, which will be held Friday, 8 P. M., at the Hotel Cadillac.

In the squash match for the Metropolitan League championship Saturday, Fearon defeated Lagrange, 15—12, 18—15, 18—16, and not Walter Kinsella as previously announced.

The return of Tommy Murphy from his recent victory over Owen Moran on the coast gives added importance to the ten-round bout scheduled at the Fairmont Athletic Club to-morrow night between Jack Goodman, the clever west side champion, and Battling Hurley, from Passaic. Both boys maintain that Murphy will have to meet the winner of this match before he can consistently go after Ad Wolgast.

A meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon at the Kaiserhof, Thirty-ninth Street and Broadway, of newspaper men who are interested in the game of golf. It will be the preliminary step toward the reorganization of the old New York Press Golf Club.

The Bedford Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will hold its annual championship swimming meet on Thursday night.

The lightweight championship battle between Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast at Richmond, Cal., on Feb. 22, was fought again yesterday in a Brooklyn theatre, but this time on a canvas with a moving picture machine. The pictures were very clear, except in the last few rounds, which were fought almost in darkness, because of delay on account of Nelson refusing to enter the ring after Wolgast had been waiting for the start of the battle.

Frankie Burns of Jersey City and Young O'Leary of this city clash in a ten-round contest at the Olympic Athletic Club to-night. Both boys have trained hard for this contest. This is their third meeting, and as each has a victory to his credit, it is expected that the contest will not last until the final round.

The Marathon Athletic Club of Brooklyn will hold an entertainment in the Clermont Avenue Rink to-night. Eddie Carr of Boston, who has a draw to his credit with Pal Moore, will have Willie Jones, the conqueror of Frankie Neil, as his opponent in a ten-round contest.

Jack Goodman, who recently fought Leach Cross, will box "Battling" Hurley of Passaic in a ten-round contest to-morrow night at the Fairmount Athletic Club. Hurley is in good shape, and his recent victory over Frankie Madden has put fear into some of the other lightweights who were unable to knock out Madden.

Jack Fitzgerald, the Philadelphia middleweight, has been matched with Connie Schmidt of New Jersey for a ten-round contest at the Sharkey Athletic Club on Wednesday night. Schmidt is an aggressive fighter and he will meet one of his class when he clashes with the Philadelphian who fought the "Dixie Kid" recently.

Sammy Smith will have Bobby Wilson, the Canadian lightweight champion, as his opponent in a ten-round contest at the Long Acre Athletic Club on Thursday night.

Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, will have Johnny Marto, the local lightweight, as his opponent in a ten-round contest at the National Sporting Club on Friday night.

ENGLAND GERMANY'S FRIEND.

But Reciprocity Must Prevail, Says Prince Henry of Prussia.

HAMBURG, March 13.—Addressing the East Asiatic Society last evening, Prince Henry of Prussia said that as a result of his visit to England he could assure his hearers that Great Britain offered to Germany an honorable and sincere friendship. The idea of aggressive action, he added, was completely absent from the minds of those constituting the British Government.

This friendship, however, rested on reciprocity, and nothing must be omitted that might serve to strengthen the confidence of the two nations in each other. The old saying, "Confidence begets confidence," he continued, was here applicable. He could answer for the friendly feelings of the naval officers, but the merchant had a similar duty to discharge, just as much as his military comrade.

Prince Henry then invited the society to give its warm support to the company projected to build at Hamburg, at a cost of $250,000, an airship dock which will accommodate at least two Zeppelin dirigibles, and to make Hamburg the first point of departure for oversea airship lines.

HELD ON BAD-CHECK CHARGE.

CHICAGO, March 13.—Sidney Hoeninghause, 34 years old, said to be the son of a retired dry goods merchant of New York, was arrested to-day, charged with passing worthless checks.

He was accompanied by a woman, also taken into custody, who gave the name of Ella Sobieske, and said she was a member of a Polish noble family.

OARSMEN BEGIN PRACTICE.

Warm Spring Sun Brings Out Many Crews on Harlem River.

There was a general awakening among the oarsmen on the Harlem River yesterday. The warm Spring sun made rowing a strong attraction, and during the day dozens of shells were on the water. Although some of the men have been working in the different boathouses on the rowing machines for the last few weeks, yesterday was the first time that the work on the river began in earnest. There was more activity along "Scullers' Row" than has been seen since early last Fall. A strong tide was running, but this did not prevent the scullers from taking the first good spin of the season.

At the Nassau Rowing Club twenty-two juniors, who will try for the crews this year, were warming up. An eight-oared barge, a six-oared barge, half a dozen singles, and two four-oared shells were on the river. The Nassau Club expects to make a strong showing in the Memorial Day Regatta, and will have entries in many of the events. It plans to have a fast junior eight and a junior four-oared gig aside from several other entries.

Oarsmen took up active training at the Harlem Rowing Club, and they have high hopes of repeating many of the victories of last year. Shepherd and Fuessell, who won the championship in the doubles, will again be entered in that event in the Memorial Day meeting, and Shepherd will enter the single sculls event again. The Harlem junior octipede, which won that event last year, has started in active work for the season.

At the Metropolitan Rowing Club many of the candidates for the different crews started in on the training season. Up to this time they have confined themselves to handball, medicine ball, and rowing on the machines to keep in shape, but many of them had long tryouts in the single shells yesterday. The Metropolitans plan to have a junior octipede, junior eight, senior octipede, junior double, intermediate four, and intermediate single entries in the Memorial Day Regatta. The club's new octipede sheel is nearly completed, and will be one of the best on the river. At the other boathouses, also, were the first signs of real work among the oarsmen. The Wyanoke, Crescent, and Bohemian Clubs had several singles and doubles, as did the Lone Star Club below the bridge.

A visitor at the rowing clubs yesterday was Park Commissioner Higgins of the Bronx, who made the welcome announcement that extensive improvements are to be made on that part of Macomb's Dam Park in the vicinity of the boathouses. He told the oarsmen that there was an appripation of $16,000 for improving this park, which had never been used. The boat clubs will co-operate with the Park Commissioner in the work of beautifying the river front near the boathouses, and work will be commenced at once on grading, laying out paths, and planting flowers and shrubbery.

BRITISH CHANCES IMPROVE.

Closer examination of the two remaining games unfinished in the cable chess match demonstrated that the game of H. G. Voigt of Philadelphia was hopeless and would be awarded to V. L. Wahltuch of Manchester. The position between H. Rosenfeld of New York and G. A. Thomas is doubtful, though the Englishman has the better prospects. Should it be declared drawn, then the British will take the match by the final score of 6 to 4, the totals by which they won in 1909.

William M. de Visser has been selected as the judge to decide upon the merits of the games played in the match and to award the special prize provided by W. S. Hurley for the best game played by an American representative. It is generally thought that the prize rests between R. T. Black, Brooklyn Chess Club champion, the only one to win his game outright for this side, and United States Champion F. J. Marshall, whose unfinished game with J. H. Blackburne will surely be awarded to him by the referee.

Soccer Cup Tie Contests.

Additional games were played in the first round of the annual cup tie contest of the New York State Football Association yesterday. The Brooklyns, cup holders, were pitted against the Arcadia Thistles at Marquette Oval, Brooklyn, and placed their National League team in the field. The result was a defeat for the Thistles by the score of 4 goals to 1, which might have been worse, but for the splendid work of Haughie at goal.

At Macomb's Dam Park, the Critchleys of Brooklyn won their State cup tie game from High Bridge by the score of 2 goals to 0. J. Tait scored the goals in the first half. He and W. Nichols, among the forwards, and H. Hynd, W. Poll, and S. Neil, in the defense, played a strong game for the winning side.

The only championship game in the annual series of the New York Amateur Association Football League was contested between the Clan McDonalds of Brooklyn and the Camerons at McDonald Oval in Brooklyn yesterday. The Camerons, erstwhile champions, were defeated by the one-sided score of 6 goals to 0.

College Basket Ball Leaders.

Lieut. Joseph W. Stillwell, U. S. A., member of the Collegiate Basket Ball Rules Committee, after a comparison of the teams whose work this season should give them more or less of a claim to the so-called basket ball championship, has by a process of elimination figured out that West Point and Rochester should be jointly considered the top-notchers, with New York University close behind, and while Williams did not play any teams outside of New England except Syracuse, Lieut. Stillwell asys that the Williams team should be able to make almost any team this year hustle.

Gilmore Leads Amateur Pool Players.

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
E. Gilmore	3	1	H. Phelps	1	1
C. Emerson	2	1	J. Stone	1	2
E. Raynolds	2	1	E. Seabury	0	2
G. Brown	2	1	R. Fisher	0	2

This afternoon's game will be between E. Seabury and R. Fisher, and to-night C. Emerson and E. Raynolds will cross cues.

CALL 160 BROKERS IN HOCKING INQUIRY

MORGAN NOT AFTER STOCK

Says Receiver Ernst, and Keene Does Not Control It, Though He's the Largest Individual Holder.

There is likely to be some crowding this afternoon in the office of United States Commissioner Alexander, for 160 stock brokers, all members of the New York Stock Exchange, are expected there at 2 o'clock in response to subpoenas issued on Saturday by Ralph Wolf, counsel for Irving L. Ernst, receiver in bankruptcy for J. M. Fiske & Co., one of the brokerage firms which went to the wall as a result of the memorable slump in Columbus & Hocking Coal and Iron stock a few weeks ago. Each broker thus far subpoenaed has been informed that he must produce his books showing all stock transfers between Dec. 1 and Feb. 1.

Mr. Wolf said yesterday that he hopes to trace, through some of the subpoenaed brokers and their books, the identity of the men who were responsible for the remarkable movement in Hocking stock on Jan. 19, as well as to learn just where most of the Hocking shares are located at present.

Mr. Wolf said that while the wholesale subpoenaing of brokers was rather unprecedented, he and Receiver Ernst decided that it was necessary in order to make the investigation of the Hocking slump as thorough as the conditions seem to warrant. Many brokers are expected to testify either to-day or on Wednesday.

Word that a lot of subpoenas had been issued in connection with the Hocking investigation spread quickly among the brokers on Saturday, and it was said yesterday that several who were desirous of keeping out of the investigation succeeded in evading the servers. As it was, about 100 brokers were served and 60 more will be rounded up this morning.

Most of the brokers served on Saturday are floor members of their respective firms. Six subpoena servers succeeded in finding many of them in the morning before the Exchange closed. The others were served at their homes or in a few instances as they were entering or leaving places of amusement or their clubs on Saturday night.

Mr. Wolf refused yesterday to give the names of the brokers for whom subpoenas had been issued. Brokers who were questioned about the matter yesterday said that such a wholesale issuing of subpoenas was a decided surprise to them, and that it indicated that the Hocking investigation was to be one of the most thorough of the kind ever made since the existence of the Stock Exchange.

"We believe that the testimony of the 160 brokers for whom subpoenas have been issued will be of vital importance in arriving at the exact cause of the failure of J. M. Fiske & Co.," said Mr. Wolf.

Mr. Wolf was asked about a story which has been current in Wall Street that some 60,000 shares of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company had been acquired in this city in the interest of a clique acting for the United States Steel Corporation or the Standard Oil Company.

"Our investigations have disclosed nothing of this sort," said Mr. Wolf. "We have found that the Hocking stock seems to be pretty widely split up and that no individual holds more than about 7,000 shares. All the talk about a clique getting hold of a large block of the stock is talk and nothing else, so far as we have learned."

Mr. Wolf said that James R. Keene is about the largest individual holder of Hocking stock, and that his holdings do not greatly exceed 7,000 shares.

One of the stories concerning Hocking stock which has been circulated around the financial district in the last few days is to the effect that an arrangement was effected last week by which the control of the Hocking properties was to be turned over to J. P. Morgan and later to be transferred to the United States Steel Corporation. According to this story there was a meeting last week between Mr. Keene, one of Mr. Morgan's partners and a member of the Stock Exchange Insolvency Committee, at which the actual value of the Hocking properties was gone into with the idea of Mr. Morgan taking them over at bargain prices.

It is said that several years ago J. P. Morgan & Co. were reported to have offered 42 for a controlling interest in the Hocking stock, but that the offer was refused. This, it is said, was long before the bull movement which sent the Hocking stock up to 90. Friends of Mr. Keene deny that any negotiations have been started by which the Morgan firm might take over control of Hocking. It is pointed out by them that Mr. Keene does not control the stock and that his freinds have not sufficient holdings to give them control.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

The last week has been one of decided irregularity in wheat and also one of quite active trading operations. The fluctuations have been several cents a bushel with the first movement of prices distinctly downward followed by a pronounced recovery on the statement of farm reserves and covering of shorts, particularly in the new crop deliveries. The break in the market at the opening of the week was largely due to general liquidation in expectation of a bearish Government report. The report while showing an increase in farm reserve of 30,000,000 bushels was not as bearish as expected, and there was a very rapid recovery in price.

The principal advance, however, was in the new crop deliveries, which were apparently heavily oversold, and shorts were eager buyers as prices were bid up. The trading toward the close of the week showed a distinct tendency away from the old-crop positions and new business was almost entirely in the July and September deliveries. This abandonment of trading in May is a strong indication of the trade feeling regarding the May situation. Owing to the small stocks of wheat in Chicago, the market becomes easily congested and readily subject to control by some of the leading interests. As a result of this the fluctuations are sharp and irregular.

The Government showing of farm reserves was construed rather bullishly on the ground that the largely increased supply with the decrease in exports had given a large net increase in the total supply of the crop for the year, and all but 30,000,000 bushels of this had disappeared.

The carry over on the first of last July was estimated by the Government in farmers' hands and by trade authorities elsewhere at 43,000,000 bushels compared with 69,000,000 bushels the previous year. This was a net decrease of 26,000,000 bushels. The crop was 73,000,000 bushels larger than the previous year and the exports of the United States wheat up to March 1 have been 69,300,000 bushels against 96,500,000 bushels the previous year, a decrease of 27,200,000 bushels. The net increase in the crop supplies and the decrease in exports gave 100,000,000 bushels increase in the supply, against which was a decrease of 26,000,000 in carry over, leaving the net increase 74,000,000 bushels in the supply for the year.

The Government figures indicated that of this increase in supply all but 30,000,000 bushels have disappeared from farmers' hands. The monthly compilation of a Western trade authority giving wheat and flour stocks of the United States shows that there is just about the same amount of wheat and flour on hand as a year ago at this time, which would indicate that this 44,000,000 bushels unaccounted for have either gone into actual consumption or are in the country in the shape of wheat and flour not at reporting points. The disappearance of wheat this season, since July 1, from visible supply points, has been just about this amount more than last year. That is, taking the Western receipts, the difference in the visible supply, and the difference in the exports, there has been apparently about 30,000,000 bushels' excess in home consumption this year. There seems to be a strong impression among flour merchants that this disappearance from visible supply points is more apparent than actual and that supplies of flour in consumers' hands are much in excess of a year ago.

New crop conditions have been reported in a very conflicting manner this week. The trade is accepting the idea that Kansas has been damaged considerably, possibly 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels from last December's indications, and that there has been a little damage elsewhere, but nothing of a vital character. Favorable weather with plenty of rain in the next two or three weeks would undoubtedly repair a great deal of the apparent damage.

Coarse grains followed in a general way the fluctuations in wheat. Corn and oats were very weak at the opening of the week, with pronounced pressure on the market, evidently the result of forced liquidation. Corn broke easily on the pressure of cash corn and the growing nervousness over the condition of corn in store and its possible keeping quality. The decline brought a great deal of stop order selling in both markets. Following the Government report there was a very rapid rally in the market and active covering of shorts.

The Government statement of corn reserves showed a total of 1,050,000,000 bushels, practically the same as last year, when the total was 1,047,000,000 bushels. The total corn crop was reported at 2,277,000,000 bushels, against 2,668,000,000 bushels the previous year, showing that, notwithstanding the increased crop, the reserves had not increased, although the quantity of live hogs in the country is much less than last year. In view of this showing and the very high price for hogs offering every inducement to feed corn there was a quick reversal in sentiment regarding the corn situation, and prices showed strong recovery. There is, however, a rather large accumulation of corn at visible supply and other points which has been pressing on the market. The decline permitted some of this to be sold for export, and the movement has been decreasing at the interior. During the past few years the low prices made in March have been followed by a general advance in the market, and operators on this theory were rather good buyers during the week.

The Government report of the reserves of oats made the total 363,000,000 bushels, against 278,000,000 bushels last year, while the crop of oats was 200,000,000 bushels more than a year ago. The figures show that with an increase in the crop of 200,000,000 bushels the reserves were only 85,000,000 bushels more than a year ago, indicating largely increased consumption, and as a result of this and the general improvement in grain prices showed a good recovery.

Hog products were excited, making new high records. Live hogs sold at 11c a pound, and produce was very strong. Packing continues deficient, and notwithstanding the steadily advancing prices for hogs the movement from the country does not increase in a way sufficient to have the effect of checking the extraordinary upward movement of values.

COTTON.

As the season advances the market is coming to differentiate more strongly between the old and the new crop conditions, and the apparent manipulation in the old crop position and the apprehension which this manipulation creates. The situation in the near positions has been more and more suggestive of manipulation for some time past, and the gossip has pointed more conclusively to such manipulation. The fight began some time ago, and seemed to be an effort on the part of the bulls defeated in the last big speculative movement to gain control of the market. Out of the last big bull movement, which ended with demoralized conditions, Mr. Patten and his following seemed to emerge with greatest success, while the Southern bull leaders were evidently by no means so successful.

The present movement seems to have been a re-entering the market by Mr. Patten and his following and the Southern bulls during the February, and the strong indication of their position was the taking in of nearly 60,000 bales of cotton on the March contracts. This was followed by the statement that the cotton would be shipped out. Freight engagements were made to Liverpool for about 40,000 bales, and this past week for about 12,000 bales to Bremen. The stock is steadily decreasing, and it is predicted that the contract stock will be barely 100,000 bales by the end of the month. The near-by positions have been steadily advanced as a result of the congestion, particularly in the May, and have now advanced to a point where there is possibility of shipping cotton not only from the South, but from mill centres, to deliver on contracts here, especially if there is any further relative hardening of the May position. This will mean so much additional responsibility for the bulls. The question which the bulls now have to solve, aside from the technical position of the market, is the ability to merchandise cotton taken in on the March and to be taken in on the May contracts. There is confident claim that there will be no difficulty in so doing. That the advance in the market is an unpopular one, particularly abroad, is shown in the week's demonstration at Manchester against Mr. Patten, where he was ignominiously driven off the floor as an expression of the feeling among spinners against the bull market. This action is undoubtedly the expression of personal hatred through personal losses on account of the bull market. It certainly shows that they have been losers abroad, and losers not in a good spirit.

The squeeze may be a successful one in squeezing the shorts, but the merchandizing of the cotton is another proposition. Mr. Patten has been very successful in the past merchandizing grain, but it is a new problem merchandizing cotton. The position of the cotton market has not developed in a way to indicate large demand. The year is more than half gone now and the probable requirements and the probable supplies for the balance of the season are more clearly indicated. So far this season the takings of American cotton have been 7,521,789 bales, against 8,759,901 bales last year, a decrease of 1,238,112 bales. Last year the total takings of American were in round numbers 13,100,000 bales. The effect of the curtailment in consumption is more and more evident as the season is advancing. At the present rate of spinners' takings the total takings for the year will evidently be at least 2,000,000 bales less than last year, and possibly 2,500,000 less. A recent estimate by Mr. Ellison is that 11,520,000 bales of American cotton will be needed this year to prevent a reduction in spinners' stocks. As the outside estimates of the comemrcial crop are about 10,500,000 bales it is evident that either the world's visible supply will have to be heavily drawn upon, or else the decrease in consumption will have to continue in excess of the rate since the opening of the year.

That the consumption is being curtailed is evident from the reports of short time, not only here but abroad, and during February the European consumption of cotton was 20,000 bales a week less than a year ago, which, if continued from March 1 to Sept. 1, seven months would be about 600,000 bales further reduction in the European consumption. In this respect the point is being strongly emphasized that the advance in cotton originally on the talk of a 10,000,000-bale crop on the 13,000,000-bale consumption was much easier than the actual consumption of a 10,500,000-bale supply at the price made on the advance. The fact seems to be that the prices are having the direct effect of squeezing consumption into the amount of cotton available.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

BOSTON, March 13.—The Lake group has focused attention in the copper world this week, phenomenal appreciation having taken place in the prices of several of these mines. It is believed that the famous Lake lode runs through the property of North Lake, which makes a bonanza of that property unless the unexpected happens. Indiana, Franklin, Bohemia, and Isle Royale stocks have been bought by Michigan people this week in increased numbers owing to the bright prospects of these properties. Franklin is opening the Pewabic lode, from which Quincy draws its copper, and has just tapped the Hancock lode. A new flotation is the Lake Superior Development Company, which has 400 acres of virgin territory in the same region as Oneco, New Baltic, and Gratiot. February production of the Calumet and Hecla properties aggregated 11,385,545 pounds, which is 300,000 less than in January. The La Salle mill run is said to show 18 pounds of mineral to the ton of rock.

A Director of Miami says that there is at least 20,000,000 tons of copper rock in the mine. The Clipper shaft of Ely Central has demonstrated commercial ore, increasing in value with depth. A large supply of water has also been developed at 135 feet, which is a valuable asset. Work at United Verde Extension is now down to the permanent water level, and a good showing of ore is being made. A fine ore body has been struck between the 1,500-foot and the tunnel levels in Daly-West.

The Lake continues to devote its principal energy to cutting out for stopes and raises, in order to expedite the preparations for enlarged shipments. The shaft is bottomed wholly in the new lode, about fifty feet below the sixth level, and exposes copper of undiminished richness there. Shipments aggregate from 100 to 120 tons of copper rock daily and the recovery is 38 to 40 pounds of mineral per ton.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Almost against its will the financial community is becoming convinced that no serious disturbance to the general business of the country and only temporary unsettlement of securities markets will follow adverse decisions from the Supreme Court in the Tobacco and Standard Oil cases, or the enactment into law of certain of the Administration's corporation proposals which, when first broached, aroused general distrust. Perhaps the opportunity which has been afforded those most vitally concerned to analyze the situation which would be created by adverse Supreme Court decisions in the two anti-trust cases and by the enactment into law of the measures proposed has, by opening up a vision of channels by which business may still be profitably conducted, had a good deal to do with the relative calmness with which the Washington situation is now regarded, but a factor of equal importance at least has been the reassuring attitude adopted and steadily maintained by men of prominence in the industrial, banking, and railroad fields. At a social gathering some days ago of a number of men of this kind discussion naturally turned upon the course of events in Washington. A widely known railroad man, expressing his opinion of the proposals so far as they affected railroads, recalled the fact that no railroad legislation brought forward within the past thirty years had met with anything save opposition from the roads. In spite of this, he asserted his belief that it would be absolutely impossible to find to-day in the ranks of railroad men a single executive who would willingly seek the return of conditions existing before the Hepburn law or the Inter-State commerce law went into effect. This assertion was followed by a plea for openmindedness and fair treatment of suggestions from whatever source for improvement in the conduct of the railroad business. A banker of many years' experience made a similar plea in respect to the various measures suggested for the carrying on of business by industrial concerns. Regarding publicity of accounts, he said that although the banking business was as highly competitive as any other line of trade it had suffered not at all from frequent examinations, from the publication of full reports several times a year, or from other rules fixed by authority, and he doubted if a reputable banker could be found in all the country who would voluntarily return to the old and secret methods of business conduct. It is apparent that from such sources there is derived a body of sentiment which can hardly fail to have great influence in minimizing the effects of untoward sequences. Such must also be the influence arising from so impartial a decision as that of the Public Service Commission—bitterly assailed when created—in the Coney Island fare matter.

If we may judge by the freedom with which the railroads of the country are ordering new equipment, for both passenger and freight service, and materials for construction work, these arteries of the country's trade are preparing for anything but an ebb in the business tide. According to the recognized organs of the iron and steel trades inquiry from railroads for between 20,000 and 25,000 cars have come to the car-building companies within the past fortnight or so, this representing future requirements and having to do not at all with the equal number of cars which have already been ordered since the opening of the present year. The power of the railroads is also considered inadequate to the task of moving the traffic in sight, and locomotives are therefore being sought upon a scale almost unprecedented and certainly not equaled since early in 1907. While this in a general way reflects the confidence of railroad managements in the future a specific example of such confidence was found last week in the action of the Board of Directors of the New York Central in increasing the dividend on the company's shares from 5 per cent. to 6 per cent. per annum. The declaration of a large extra dividend by one of its controlled lines, the Lake Shore, had brought into the Central's treasury from this source alone sufficient funds to cover the increase, but this was not the sole excuse for its making. A similar rate was established in 1907, but abandoned because of diminished earnings following the panic, and it is safe to assume that the present 6 per cent. distribution has not been established without careful thought regarding the ability of the company to maintain it. From the iron and steel trade there came to hand last week figures on pig iron production for the month of February. The total output of the month, which was, of course, one of twenty-eight days as compared with thirty-one days for January, ran to 2,397,000 tons, or a daily rate of 1,468 tons in excess of the production in January. Some of this iron, according to the trade journals, was added to supplies in yards, but the percentage was very small. There was disappointment over the copper production figures for February, for where a decrease in stocks nearly, if not quite as large as the 41,000,000 pounds decrease of January had been expected, supplies were enlarged by 8,700,000 pounds. Domestic takings were smaller than in the preceding month, and exports of the metal fell away to the smallest figures in exactly a year.

Indeterminate factors of fundamental importance in the financial situation continue to exist in the unsettled labor conditions and the crop position. The situation in Philadelphia, where the labor difficulties first came to a head, seemed to be undergoing betterment at the week's close in that while rioting and interruption to business were still suffered no such crippling of the city's industries as had been threatened by the calling of a general strike occurred. The going out of 1,200 men from plants of the International Paper Company seemed to concern that company alone, although there is always present the danger of a spread of unrest, as evidenced in Philadelphia. These happenings have served to direct attention to the position of the railroads and their employes. Demands have been presented by different groups and rejected by the roads, and subsequent negotiations entered upon looking to compromises have not yet been concluded. There is just enough uncertainty in the railroad labor situation, which is everywhere recognized as the real matter of moment, to temper the optimism which returns from trade in all directions have created. From the Winter wheat fields the week's reports were reassuring. Careful investigation of earlier damage reports revealed only limited areas as affected.

Sales of our securities, particularly of the many new issues brought out within the last fortnight, to foreign investors and investment institutions was not only a satisfactory development of the week in a sentimental way but was also decidedly helpful in a purely financial way in that it led to the creation of bills which provoked a sharp decline in the foreign exchange market. Money rates continue to work firmer here as a result of expanding business in all quarters of the country, and in England the temporary financing which the Government has been forced into as a result of the political situation worked to the same end. The Bank of England was again releasing gold in large amounts for shipment to various points, including South America, Egypt, and France, a fact of direct importance to our own markets since our foreign trade continues to afford inadequate balances. February's domestic exports totaled $49,417,000, against $66,512,000 in January last, and $63,778,000 and $94,600,000 in February, 1909 and 1908, respectively. At the moment we are making up by sales of securities for the smaller volume of our exports of cotton and wheat, although last week's Government report on grain reserves disclosed holdings of 30,000,000 bushels in farmers' hands in excess of the amount held last year, a figure practically equaling the loss in wheat exports for the eight months of the present fiscal year.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE.

DEARER MONEY EXPECTED.

Advance Foreshadowed in London by Widespread Speculation Prevailing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 13.—Owing to an unlooked-for demand for gold for India, resulting from good trade there, there is some expectation of an advance in the Bank of England rate of discount. Quotations in the open market have advanced to within a fraction of the official rate. Dearer money in any case is foreshadowed by the widespread character of the prevailing speculation.

The nineteen-day account which is now being closed is one of the busiest in the history of the London Stock Exchange. Business has been kept up in the Street till a late hour every evening and many firms have had to keep part of their staffs employed throughout the night. Rubber, Rhodesian, and Rand shares are the three heads of the boom from which even the British railway market has benefited.

BERLIN ERRATIC, BUT DULL.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 13.—The market was both erratic and dull last week. Steel and iron issues rose and then fell on the strength of contradictory trade reports. The uncertainty in connection with these stocks was aggravated by the obscurity of the American iron situation.

Other issues fluctuated in sympathy with the wavering tendencies of the steel and iron section, but the net result was a general listlessness in speculative quarters.

Hamburg-American shares were weak on rumors to the effect that General Manager Ballin was in bad health, while North German Lloyd shares were active in expectation of yesterday's 1909 balance sheet showing net earnings of $8,250,000, but no dividend.

UPS AND DOWNS IN PARIS.

Fluctuations on the Bourse Greater Than for Some Weeks Past.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 13.—The Bourse showed greater fluctuations during the last week than for some weeks past, but remained firm at the same time. Yesterday gold mines were the centre of interest, with steady buying for the account of London.

OVERPRODUCTION OF PIG IRON SHOWN

CAN'T USE SO MUCH IRON

While Iron Market Is Weak the Inquiry for Structural Steel Grows Apace and Other Departments Are Strong.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 13.—On sales totaling the heaviest tonnage of any week this year, nearly all grades of pig iron in the Pittsburg district touched new low marks last week, in the face of a reviving demand for crude and finished steel. Concessions on 17,000 tons of Bessemer made the net price about $17.75, valleys, as compared with $18, the minimum for the past month; basic iron barely held its own at $16.25, valleys, on sales of 7,000 tons to steel-making interests of the district; foundry grades were hammered down to a basis under $16 for No. 2 in the bidding on the Westinghouse Electric inquiry for 15,000 tons for the last half, and, lastly, a Pittsburg district sanitary interest established a new low record for Southern iron by taking up 1,500 tons, presumably from speculators, for near-by delivery, at $12.50, Birmingham, an even 50 cents under all previous known sales of Southern iron this year.

These declines, in the midst of heavy inquiries and a rising market in steel products, are accepted as meaning only one thing—that the present rate of production a year is more than the country's present steel capacity can absorb. The overproduction, first observed in the South before the close of last year, has extended through Pittsburg and central territory. In the case of one sale of Bessemer iron last week the buyer wanted deliveries to begin June 1, and the furnace company was compelled to confess that its yards were piled so full of iron that it would be necessary to begin shipments immediately or shut down the furnace. For this reason the buyer, on consideration of accepting deliveries beginning March 15, was allowed to deduct interest on the tonnage to June 1—thus securing him the iron at a net price of about $17.70, furnace.

With only eight furnaces idle out of a total of ninety-four stacks in the Pittsburg, Mahoning and Shenango Valley districts during February, the pig-iron producers in this territory increased their daily output during the month. The total pig-iron production of the country for February was 2,397,254 tons, and this total established a new high record for pig iron produced in twelve consecutive months. The highest output record for a calendar year in the history of the industry was last year's, 25,910,000 gross tons. The twelve consecutive months ending with October, 1907, however, had beaten this figure by showing a total of 27,152,000 tons. Last month's output gives the country a new high mark, bringing the total for the twelve months beginning March 1, 1909, and ending Feb. 28, 1910, to 27,300,430 tons.

Inquiries are pending for 12,000 tons of foundry iron, while the Steel Corporation is a tentative purchaser of Bessemer. The corporation occupies a peculiar position in relation to the independent makers of Bessemer iron. Many of its contracts for crude steel are based on the market price of Bessemer, which gives its sales department a personal interest in the Bessemer market. During the past thirty days four Steel Corporation pig-iron furnaces have shut down for repairs—three Carnegie Company stacks in the Valleys and Wheeling districts and one Illinois Steel Company stack at Joliet. All these furnaces are undoubtedly in need of repairs, having made long runs under pressure; but it is not customary for the company to allow that number to go out of blast in a single month. The corporation mills are consuming pig iron almost at as great a rate as during the heaviest months of last Fall. It will probably be necessary for the Steel Corporation to go into the open market within the next sixty days to get a full quota of iron. It will thus be in a position of buying Bessemer iron to uphold the market, while it allows some of its own furnaces to rest.

The bi-monthly settlement on the bar iron wage scale was completed last Friday. The settlement governs the wages of the puddlers and finishers for the next two months, on the sliding scale. The sales sheets of the bar iron produces showed an average on flat sales of bar iron of 1.45c. for the months of January and February, as against 1.419c. for November-December. The change in the base rate will give the puddlers a wage advance of 12½ cents and the finishers 1 per cent.

Structural lettings in the Middle West for the week were the heaviest since the opening of the year, the railroads alone furnishing 12,000 tons of new work in the Central States. Shading on structural materials has disappeared with the better demand, and the taking of delayed deliveries by consumers who a month ago were asking the mills to postpone shipment. Wire is stronger, though there are still evidences of shading. Pipe mills are waiting for the annual meeting period to expire in the merchant pipe trade. Business in small pipe will not open up before the last week in the month. Four hundred wrought pipe jobbers are to be here to-morrow for the three days' session of the National Association of Jobbers of Wrought Pipe and Fittings, of which Col. A. E. Ford of Philadelphia is President. The visiting jobbers will inspect pipe plants in the Pittsburg district at the close of the convention on Thursday.

Steel car plants are specifying in excess of their running contracts on plates. The two large local car companies are filled up to Sept. 1 with orders, and some of the railroads are demanding penalty clauses in their contracts to enforce deliveries of new cars, which is a new thing in the car trade. The Howard Axle Works of the Carnegie Company has booked orders within the past fortnight for 40,000 car axles, 12,000 of which are for the New York Central. The Carnegie Steel Company has adopted plans for enlarging the facilities of its two car wheel plants.

Connellsville has failed in the effort to restrict coke production. The output of the region for the week ended March 5 was 467,311 tons as compared with 461,774 tons the week of Feb. 23 and 463,311 tons one week earlier. Inquiries have been put out by consumers for contracts for their coke supply for the last half of the year. Consumers expect to be able to contract for the second half on a basis of $2.25 to $2.35. Producers intimate that they will ask $2.50, even though spot coke can be had at $2.10. Foundry coke is quoted at about $2.75, Connellsville.

TAFT'S FIRST YEAR.

In the year of President Taft's Administration that closed March 4 the revenues of the Government increased $74,290,820.84 over those of the last year of the Roosevelt Administration. The expenditures during the year, including those upon the Panama Canal, have been $2,882,370.86 greater than during the previous year. Owing to the difference in the make-up of the daily Treasury statement it is impossible to compare the ordinary expenditures exclusive of the Panama costs. During the fiscal year 1908-9 there was $38,093,425.29 spent on the canal. Up to March 4 of this fiscal year $22,183,458.93 had been expended. At this rate the canal costs during the present fiscal year will be $33,275,248.32. This would indicate a rate of expenditure about $5,000,000 a year greater in 1908 than during the past year; so that the ordinary expenditures have been about $7,800,000 greater during the first year of Mr. Taft's Administration than during the year just before. The year's finances in detail, with the totals of the previous year, are as follows:

Says Half of Our Milk Is Impure.

The Association of Collegiate Alumnae at its meeting Saturday afternoon had as one of its speakers Robert W. Bruere, who spoke of scientific philanthropy in New York, particularly in connection with the milk problem. About 50 per cent. of the milk supplied to this city is impure, Mr. Bruere stated, because so long as farmers receive only from 1¾ to 3¾ cents a quart for milk it becomes impossible to produce pure milk except at a loss. The 40,000 farms which supply the milk of the city should be enabled to cooperate by a scientific laboratory dairy plant, said Mr. Bruere. Such an experimental station has been started to see whether good milk can be supplied economically.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF LIQUIDATION, CITY DEBT, Room 206 City Hall Annex.
New Orleans, March 11, 1910.

The Board of Liquidation, City Debt, acting under authority of Act No. 19 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the session of 1906 and Act No. 116 of said General Assembly for the session of 1908, both of which said acts have been ratified by Constitutional Amendments and have become part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at its office in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, up to twelve o'clock noon on Tuesday, April 12th, 1910, for the purchase of seven million dollars in face value of the new public improvement bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under the provisions of the acts aforementioned and the Constitutional Amendments ratifying same.

Said bonds are of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, and bear interest at the rate of four per cent. (4%) per annum, evidenced by interest coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July of each year respectively. They are by law exempt from taxation, State, parish and municipal.

Said bonds are payable January 1st, 1942, and are subject to call at the option of the City of New Orleans after January 1st, 1928, and will be issued under and subject to the acts aforementioned, which are referred to and made part hereof for greater certainty and particularity. Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to wit:

1st. No sale shall be made of any of the said bonds unless the aggregate of the bid or bids shall be for the full amount of said bonds, to wit, $7,000,000 in face value.

2d. Said bonds will be adjudicated to the highest bidder or bidders, provided that said bonds or any part thereof, shall not be adjudicated for less than par and accrued interest, less a commission not to exceed six per centum on the principal thereof.

3d. All matured interest coupons on said bonds shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder or bidders shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery.

4th. Said bonds shall be paid for by the successful bidder or bidders in cash as fast as they can be signed and delivered, said deliveries to be made on twenty-four hours' notice.

All bonds to be delivered within a period not to exceed ninety days from date of final acceptance of bid.

5th. No bid will be received or considered unless accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans for three per cent. of the amount of each bid, the check or checks of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the Board of Liquidation as a guarantee that the said bidder or bidders will comply with his or their bids, and said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to said bidder or bidders respectively. In case of neglect or refusal to comply with any bid the proceeds of said bidder's check shall be forfeited to the Sewerage and Water Board.

6th. The Board of Liquidation, City Debt, reserves the right to reject any and all bids. Mark all bids "Proposals for purchase of new public improvement bonds."

THE ROBERT EMMET COPPER COMPANY OF MONTANA

OFFERS FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTION 50,000 SHARES

OF ITS TREASURY STOCK

SAMUEL PRATT, Vice-President.

Authorized Capital, $3,000,000.

DIVIDED INTO 600,000 SHARES OF THE PAR VALUE OF $5.00 EACH.

Present Public Issue, 50,000 Shares, Leaving in Treasury 250,000 Shares

The property of the Robert Emmet Copper Company consists of 5 patented claims, about 80 acres, all of which is virgin mineral land, in the well-known copper-silver-lead (Corbin) district of Jefferson County, Montana, lying between Butte and Helena, it being an accepted fact that the mineralization of the Corbin district is a continuation or part of the rich ore bodies of Butte.

Development, still being carried on, has placed in sight sufficient ore to fully justify, according to the reports of three well-known and qualified engineers, the erection of a concentrating mill of 100 tons' daily capacity, to be later increased possibly to 500 tons, as additional development work warrants—to date approximately $200,000 has been expended in this development work—electrifying the mine, and erecting a most complete plant for the work.

The Robert Emmet ores will average better than 5% copper, 10 oz. silver and 10% lead, which, after making a most liberal allowance for loss in concentrating and smelting, and calculating the selling price of copper at 14 cents, silver at 50 cents and lead at 4 cents, a 100-ton mill will return the following values:

COPPER

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held February 18, 1910, the following petition was received:

TO THE HONORABLE BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT, CITY OF NEW YORK:

FIRST: That your petitioner is a street surface railroad corporation organized and existing under the Laws of the State of New York, and has duly made and filed, pursuant to Section 90 of the Railroad Law, a statement of extension, branch of, alterations and changes in its Road herein proposed, together with a Map showing the proposed change.

SECOND: Your petitioner now operates in the Borough of Richmond, City of New York, a double-track surface railroad by means of an overhead system of electrical power, a portion of which runs through, along, and upon Wiener Place (or Street) in said Borough, to and across Central Avenue, to and through Private Right of Way, to and along Tompkins Avenue to junction of Richmond Turnpike and Arrietta Street.

THIRD: The City of New York is now engaged extending Stuyvesant Place (or Street) from intersection of Wiener Place to and across Arrietta Street to junction with Griffin Street.

FOURTH: Your petitioner will relinquish that portion of franchise on Wiener Place and Tompkins Avenue, and prays that in lieu thereof a franchise be granted to lay rails and operate Road on new Stuyvesant Place (or Street) Extension to and across Arrietta Street to junction with Griffin Street, a distance of one thousand and fifty feet (1,050',) more or less, as shown on accompanying tracing.

FIFTH: Your petitioner now holds franchises on Arrietta Street from Richmond Turnpike to New York Bay, granted by the Village of New Brighton, March 28th, 1895, and July 11th, 1895, and Village of Edgewater, June 26, 1895, to the Staten Island Electric Railroad, (to all of the rights and franchises of which Company your petitioner is the successor,) and now asks your Honorable Board to grant authority to lay rails and operate road on Arrietta Street from intersection or Central Avenue and Stuyvesant Place to Richmond Turnpike.

SIXTH: May 29th, 1905, your petitioner leased from Department of Docks and Ferries, right to operate its railroad from Jay Street to Ferry Landing over Viaduct and portion of Ferry Terminal, and prays that franchise be granted by your Honorable Board.

SEVENTH: Your petitioner proposes to operate the Road to be constructed upon such altered and changed route, by the overhead trolley system of electricity, substantially similar to that now in use on its other lines, or by such other motive power (other than locomotive steam power) as may be lawfully employed.

Your petitioner therefore prays that the franchise hereinbefore mentioned, on Stuyvesant Place (or Street) Extension, be granted to it in lieu of the franchise now enjoyed by it on and along Wiener Place and Tompkins Avenue. Also that authority be given to lay rails and operate on Arrietta Street between Stuyvesant Place (or Street) Extension and Richmond Turnpike, and that the franchise for operating over the Viaduct and portion of Ferry Terminal be granted by your Honorable Board.

WHEREFORE your petitioner prays that Public Notice hereof of the time and place when and where this Application will be first considered, be given as required by the provisions of Section 92 of the Railroad Law and of all other laws applicable thereto, and that the desired consent or franchise be granted in accordance with the provisions of the Greater New York Charter and the Laws of the State.

MAY HAVE TO CLOSE IMMIGRANT SCHOOL

Baron de Hirsch Fund Trustees Withdraw $12,000 Annual Subsidy from Educational Alliance.

A BLOW TO THE EAST SIDE

40,000 Children Have Studied English There in the Twenty Years of Its Existence.

The east side heard with consternation yesterday that there was a possibility that the Educational Alliance, the big Jewish settlement house at East Broadway and Jefferson Street, may have to close its school for the teaching of English to immigrant children, which has been considered perhaps the chief activity of the Alliance among the poor of the east side.

This school has been one of the show places of the east side, and the pride of the Educational Alliance. It takes immigrant children, mostly of Jewish parentage, immediately after they arrive in this country, grades them according to the ages and the knowledge they possess, and then teaches them English so that they can enter the grades in the public schools to which they would belong.

The rapidity with which the children learn the English language and American ways is one of the interesting things on the east side which is always pointed out to visitors. Inside of three, four or six weeks they speak very good English, and none of them ever remains in this school more than three months. There are three to four hundred children in the school all the time, and as these graduate new ones take their places. It has been estimated that from thirty-five to forty thousand children have passed through this school into the public schools.

The reason it is said there is a possibility of the alliance closing this school is the reported withdrawal of a large sum of money from its support, which up to this time has been given to the school by the Baron de Hirsch Fund of this city. The Baron de Hirsch Fund is a branch of the Jewish Colonization Association of Paris, whose object is to use the Baron de Hirsch millions to further the welfare of Jewish immigrants in all parts of the world. For the last twenty years this fund has subsidized the Educational Alliance School for immigrant children to the extent of $12,000 a year.

The Trustees of the Baron de Hirsch Fund, it is learned, called together several of the representatives of the Educational Alliance last week and notified them formally that either the whole or the larger part of this sum will not be contributed to the school in the future. The reason for this action is said not to be any dissatisfaction on the part of the Baron de Hirsch Trustees with the conduct of the school, but is due to the fact that the fund is preparing to expend more money in another of its enterprises, the Baron de Hirsch Trade School, in East Sixty-fourth Street, whose object is to teach trades to the sons of immigrants, and for which it expects to build larger quarters.

What will be done because of the withdrawal of the $12,000 will be decided at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Educational Alliance next Tuesday.

It is not expected that the total abandonment of the work will result, for, according to the report of the Educational Alliance, that society itself contributed a considerable amount to the running of the school, the $12,000 subsidy not being sufficient to cover all expenses. It is expected that before the Alliance Directors will allow the school to be closed up entirely a special appeal will be made to Jewish philanthropists of the city.

Last year the Baron de Hirsch Fund Trustees were subject to much criticism because they suddenly withdrew their financial support from a similar school for immigrant children which they had subsidized in Brownsville and which was conducted by the Hebrew Educational Society. As a result this school was abandoned altogether.

The Educational Alliance has also been using the $12,000 subsidy to run a Summer school in English for adult immigrants, after the classes in English which the Board of Education conducts have closed for the Summer. The Board of Education also conducts special classes for the teaching of English to children, patterned after the Alliance classes. But they are unable to accommodate the whole number of immigrant children.

WED HIS STENOGRAPHER.

Belated Announcement of J. M. Gerard's Marriage to Miss Schedel.

The report that Julian M. Gerard, a wealthy broker of 49 Wall Street, was to wed a daughter of a prominent old New York family, led to the announcement yesterday of his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Schedel, his stenographer, last September. Only the immediate members of Mr. Gerard's family, which includes his brother, Justice James W. Gerard, knew of the wedding, and after the ceremony the couple left on one of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company liners for Cartagena, Colombia, where the bridegroom has valuable mining interests.

On leaving the coast he and his bride had to ride up country on donkeys into the moutains, where Mrs. Gerard acted as cook in their tent. They returned to this city about Jan. 25, and took an apartment at the Hotel Manhattan.

Julian M. Gerard was born in the Gerard house on Gramercy Park, where his father, James W. Gerard, died on Jan. 28, 1900. His brother, James, married the daughter of Marcus Daly in 1901.

DR. KOHLER GETS $25,000.

He has been there for the past two weeks, lecturing on the work of the institution, and hopes to bring back with hi mfully $100,000.

The college here is to be built by next Fall. Already the fund exceeds $100,000, and $50,000 must be added to this before the work is started. The college is for the education of Jewish clergymen.

Fur Workers Want More Pay.

It was announced yesterday by the officers of the Fur Workers' Union that they have called a mass meeting of the fur workers this week to draw up demands on behalf of the 12,000 fur workers in this city for an increase in wages. Last Christmas Day there was to have been a general strike of the furriers, but at the last moment it was called off, on the ground that the time was inopportune. Recently, the officers of the union said yesterday, the demand for furriers has been increasing rapidly, on account of the operations of the new tariff law.

Killed in Polo Game.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 13.—J. Dunstan Freeman, one of the most expert polo players in America, died in a hospital here to-day from injuries received in a practice game at Coronado yesterday. Mr. Freeman's pony and that ridden by R. Weiss of the Southwest Polo Club of Los Angeles collided and Mr. Freeman was struck on the head, sustaining concussion of the brain.

Decision on Packers' Writ To-day.

Swayze of the New Jersey Supreme Court will announce his decision in his court in Jersey City today on a motion made last week by Prosecutor Pierre Garvan of Hudson County to compel the production in court of the books and papers of the beef packers and cold storage concerns under indictment.

BIG FIRE IN JAMESTOWN.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Monday March 14.—Fire started at 1 o'clock this morning in the ruins of the Gokey Building which was burned Saturday night, with the loss of two lives and $100,000 in property.

In half an hour the Duffy Building adjacent was beyond hope. The firemen were helpless in the heavy wind. All electric power has been put off and all wire service out of town has been interrupted.

At 2 o'clock the ruins of the burned building fell and the flames ate into the next block adjoining. Desperate efforts are being made to save the Sherman House, one of the finest hotels in Western New York. At least one side of an entire block will be wiped out.

GIFT FOR FRENCH PASTOR.

Worshippers at 27th Street Church Make a Presentation to Mr. Wittmeyer

The Rev. A. V. Wittmeyer, rector of the French Episcopal church, Eglise du Saint Esprit, on Twenty-seventh Street, between Fourth and Madison Avenues, had a surprise celebration yesterday, the thirtieth of his pastorate. The church was decorated with flowers and palms, there was special music, and in the evening a large congregation was out to witness the presentation of a handsome silver service, with a large basket of flowers. Archdeacon Nelson of the diocese assisted at the service and made the presentation in French.

The service was a handsome one, with the two dates "1880-1910" on each piece and the words in French on the salver: "Offered by the Faithful of L'Eglise du Saint Esprit." The church moved up to its present location from Twenty-second Street, and this property, which is opposite Madison Square Garden, though it has increased in value financially, has also decreased for church purposes, and there will be another move as soon as the land can be advantageously sold.

Speaking of this last evening, Mr. Wittmeyer told of the work he wished the church to do when it had room for a parish house; among other things, to sustain a school where the children of the congregation could study the language of their fathers. The church helps to sustain Protestant churches in France for part of its mission work.

A large bouquet of roses was presented to Mrs. Wittmeyer last night, and cake and ice cream were served in the basement of the church after the service. Archdeacon Nelson, who assisted at the service, and Mr. Wittmeyer began their work in New York in the same year. The translation of the Episcopal Prayer Book used in the church from English into French is a work Mr. Wittmeyer has done since he has been connected with the pastorate.

ELEPHANT TRAINER'S SUICIDE.

Robert Orville Tyler, 26 years old, an elephant trainer, who cut his throat last Thursday night at his home, 254 West Thirty-ninth Street, in the presence of his wife, just before guests arrived to have dinner with him, died early yesterday in Bellevue Hospital

Tyler had just returned from a trip on the road with his elephant Imogen, the so-called soubrette of "The Circus Man." His wife, Leila Romer Tyler, had invited about a dozen friends to dinner Thursday night as a sort of welcome-home party. When Tyler got home he found his rooms all done up in flowers and green plants, with the dinner table ready.

"Is everything ready, dear?" he asked.

"Nothing missing but our friends," she answered, "and they will be here in a minute."

Tyler started as an elephant trainer with Walter L. Main. He was later employed by Cummings's Wild West Show and the Cleveland, Boston, and New York Hippodromes. For a while he had charge of the Luna Park elephants at Coney Island. Last July he took up the training of Imogen for her part in "The Circus Man." He worked hard and successfully with her, but his labors left his nerves broken. His wife is well known in musical comedy.

VON PREUESCHEN WORKS

German Ambassador Opens Exhibit of Baroness's Paintings.

An exhibition of paintings by Baroness von Preuschen was held yesterday afternoon at the Von Ende Violin School, 58 West Ninetieth Street. Some 250 artists and musicians, with persons in society, were present. Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, and his wife came over from Washington to open the exhibition and introduce the Baroness von Preuschen to the guests. It is the first exhibition of the work of the German painter that has been held in this country.

The exhibition opened with a musical programme. Mme. Fornia of the Metropolitan Opera House sang several selections; a boy named Ollstein, a pupil of Herweth Von Ende, played a violin solo, and the Von Ende violin choir of fifteen violins played selections from Wagner and Greig.

There are some sixty paintings in the collection, and they will be on view for several weeks. They are mostly landscapes of scenes in India, Java, and other countries. A few are allegorical, one being called "Circe" and another "The Vampire." In the collection there is a portrait of the Baroness von Preuschen by the late Empress Frederick of Germany, which was painted when she was 18 years old. The Baroness is also a poet of distinction, and to-night at the same studio she will give a reading of both her own poems and those of her late husband, Conrad Tellman.

GOT MISER'S HOARD ONLY TO LOSE IT

SHE HAD LIVED IN WANT

After Giving Aged Peddler with a Wife in Russia Her Small Inheritance—He Saved for a Store.

The many-tongued east side told a story with particular relish yesterday. It was the sort of a story which that part of this city especially delights in. The east side is poor, so the story was naturally full of wealth. It was also a story of secrecy and mystery, and the east side is partial to "mystery" stories—perhaps because it lives in crowded tenements, four families to a floor, under conditions in which no secret can stay unknown for more than twenty-four hours.

Mordecai Wolfe Chaiman, an elderly man, and his wife Giffel—so the story went yesterday—have been living in the dark, ash-brown basement at 314 Henry Street ever since they were married, eleven years ago. With their nine-year-old boy, Jacob, they lived in two small, ill-lighted rooms hardly larger than closets. Chaiman was a Delancey Street peddler. To help out the family fortunes his wife, Giffel, got a little portable tray and went out on the street selling candy. When she married him she gave him $1,500 which a former husband had left her. She told him to take care of it because she was illiterate and did not know how to keep it. No one else on the east side dreamed that the Chaimans had this sum. And as years went on Mrs. Chaiman came to forget that she ever had had it. She got used to thinking and having other people think that she was having a hard time to get along.

"I am going to the hospital. I feel it is my last illness. I will never come back to you. But here is the money—our money—the money which you gave me and the money which we afterward made together. Keep it for yourself and our child."

This is what the east side says he told his wife one day. He handed her eight books, which she had often seen him poring over, but which, being unable to read, she had never understood. Whenever she had asked him about them he had always answered indefinitely that he was going to use them some day to start a "big clothing store." After handing her the books he made her help him over to St. Joseph's Hospital. And there, being far gone with consumption, he died.

After the custom of all good widows of the east side, Mrs. Chaiman, as soon as her husband died, went into seclusion. For eight days she shut herself up in her two basement rooms and sat in a corner and—to use the east side's expression—"concentrated her thoughts on the dead." When the eight days were up, she went over to 105 Attorney Street and showed the eight books to Mrs. Sophie Mayer, a woman lawyer. Mrs. Mayer saw they were bankbooks. But she was considerably startled on looking through them to find that they represented close to $5,000—enough, if invested in an annuity, to make the street candy seller comfortable for the rest of her life

The books showed that the old east side peddler had accounts in the Manhattan State Bank for $1,397; State Bank, in Grand Street, $931; the Jarmulowsky Bank, in Canal Street, $272; the Jarmulowsky Bank, in East Broadway, $200; the Adolph Mandel Bank, in Rivington Street, $566; and other substantial accounts in two other private east side banks. So secretive had been the old peddler about his wealth that he had put the money in the banks under different names. One name he used was "Wolfe Zeumann," another was "Wolf Zoeman," another was "Wolfe Chaman." For years he had used a different name in dealing with each bank. A possible reason for this odd act on the peddler's part came out when Mrs. Mayer went over to the Surrogate's Office to take out letters of administration. She discovered how unfortunate it was that Mrs. Chaiman had sat grieving for her husband for eight days instead of indulging in the more practical duties of an executrix.

A nephew of the dead man, whom Mrs. Chaiman says she had never known anything about, had already taken out letters of administration. According to this nephew, the dead man, when he married Mrs. Chaiman eleven years ago, already had a wife and three children in Ouman, Russia. The nephew produced four witnesses to prove this. Mrs. Mayer, for Mrs. Chaiman, immediately applied for a revocation of the nephew's letters of administration on the ground that the money represented by the bankbooks was mostly the result of her client's savings and earnings. The turning over of the bankbooks to Mrs. Chaiman by old Chaiman before he went to the hospital was "a gift in anticipation of death," Mrs. Mayer says. The matter will be argued before Surrogate Cohalan on April 5. Meantime the money is tied up and Mrs. Chaiman is walking about the east side streets every day selling candy to support herself and her nine-year-old boy. What interested the east side in the story yesterday, however, was not its legal aspect.

"Think of old Mordecai Chaiman living in that basement when he had so much money and think how smart he must have thought himself to conceal his wealth for years under different names," the tenement people said.

KILLED FOR A PAIL OF COAL.

John Fryer of 178 Avenue E, Bayonne, was told by his wife yesterday that there wasn't any coal in the house. He took a pail, and, going to the tracks of the Central Railroad, close by, began filling it with coal from one of the cars. Two of the company special policemen saw Fryer, and after a dispute there was a revolver shot, and Fryer dropped his pail and sank unconscious to the tracks, shot in the stomach.

The policemen hurried off, and among a crowd that gathered about Fryer was his wife. When she recognized her husband she fell in a paint across his body. She was taken home by neighbors, and her husband was removed to the City Hospital, where he died.

George Van Wickle of 1,034 Flora Street, Elizabeth, and Frank Minch of 349 Clark Place, Elizabethport, special policemen for the railroad company, were arrested by Detectives Mullaney and Lazarus. They were taken before Fryer, who identified Van Wickle as the man who shot him. Van Wickle denied having had anything to do with the affair, but he was locked up on a charge of assault. Minch was released.

Children Play for Ansonia Guests.

The grill room of the Ansonia, at Broadway and Seventy-third Street, was crowded with diners last night who lingered to hear a concert by the three Kahn children, aged 9, 11, and 12 years respectively. They played the piano, violin, and cornet, and the audience accorded them generous applause. They are the protégés of Prof. Gordahn, director of the Ansonia orchestra.

Verdi's "Requiem" at Metropolitan.

Verdi's "Requiem Mass" was sung for the second time this season last night at the Metropolitan Opera House. The soloists were Mmes. Emmy Destinn and Louise Homer, and Messrs. Riccardo Martin and Herbert Witherspoon. The full Opera House chorus and orchestra assisted, under the direction of Mr. Toscanini.

Killed by Fall from Moving Train.

At the Jersey Avenue crossing of the Erie Railroad in Jersey City early yesterday morning Flavel H. Wickware, Jr., of 85 Feronia Way, Rutherford, N. J., a clerk employed in a woolen house here, fell from a passenger train and was killed. He was passing from one car to another, and it is presumed he slipped and fell to the roadbed. His trousers were cut in such a manner that a hip pocket containing $9.66 was torn off. He had a commuter's ticket that identified him.

GALLERY NOTES.

Important Exhibits of Tapestries and Textiles—Mr. Koppay's Portraits.

At the American Art Galleries this week is an interesting collection of tapestries, rugs, textiles, furniture, brass plaques, marbles, and so forth, on exhibition prior to their sale, by order of Vitall Benguiat. The tapestries and embroideries are particularly attractive and important, examples that not only bear the stamp of their period and class, but have their individual charm of design.

One tapestry panel, Gothic in character, illustrates avarice. An elderly woman, mounted on a chimeric lion and clutching a bag of gold, represents greed, an ingenious variation on the hackneyed symbol of the miser and quite in the spirit of the old engravers, by whom vices and virtues were evoked in these spirited human aspects. In fact, no more fruitful or amusing occupation for a collector of tapestries can be imagined than by tracing the relations of the types and symbols used in tapestry designs to the types and symbols used in pictures and engravings of the same periods. The weaving of the "Avarice" piece is done on a coarse warp in dull tones of red, blue, and yellow. It is to be noted that the design has the decorative character that belongs to good antique tapestries, and not at all the look of imitation of a painting that characterizes inferior examples.

A Flemish Renaissance tapestry which tells no story in particular represents a landscape scene, with animals, birds and reptiles, and two or three human figures. The landscape scene is subordinated to the animal portraits, which are unusually large and striking. The colors are charmingly soft and harmonious.

One of the galleries is entirely given up to Spanish work in defferent decorative kinds, and one of the interesting pieces in this room is a rug known as the "parrot rug," the coloring and design both having been copied from the bright plumage parrots. The centre is decorated with a large vase, formed of patterns taken from aboriginal America, then guessed at, rather than known by Europeans—spear heads, tents, &c. The weave is supposed to have been made as a compliment to Ferdinand and Isabella on the occasion of the discovery of the New World.

Among the many valuable and elaborate embroideries is one that arrests attention by its quaint realism. It consists of sixteen compartments set in the frame of an Elizabethan cabinet. Each compartment is embroidered with colored silks and gold and silver bullion. The subjects are animals of all kinds, and the centre compartment represents the Garden of Eden with the Tree and the figures of Adam and Eve. The needlework comprises many stitches, satin stitch, seed stitch, darning stitch. French knots, couching stitch and others, and the figures are done over a thick stuffing, giving them a very high relief. A similar subject in better preservation and more beautifully worked is in the Cluny Museum, and is ascribed to the French school of the sixteenth century.

The antique repoussé brass plaques are numerous enough to constitute a large section of the exhibit, nearly all are Venetian, and the earlier examples are very handsome.

From the handicrafts of the Gothic and Renaissance periods to the handicrafts of the nineteenth century, is a long step in more senses than one, but we have at least arrived at a certain amount of coherence in our aims so that American specimens in a general exhibition of modern arts and crafts would be distinguishable from the French and English examples.

A gratifying little exhibit is now on view at the Scuola Gallery of silver work, enameling, jewelry, &c., by Miss Mills, Miss MacCarty, and Miss Deming. All three are competent craftsmen, Miss Mills having studied enameling and metal work in London for two years with Alexander Fisher, and in the Sir John Cass School, and later in the Goldsmiths' Guild in Stockholm. Miss MacCarty worked with John La Farge and with Louis Tiffany, doing metal work also under Mr. John Petty of Sheffield, England, and Miss Deming, having apprenticed herself to Miss Peacock and Miss Froelich, worked for two years in the Veltin studio, drawn under John W. Alexander, modeled with Herbert Adams, designed with Mrs. Sprague Smith, and taken lessons in jewelry with Mr. Hamann of Pratt Institute.

The work, although indicating individuality, shows one characteristic in common, a robust lack of eccentricity. There are a number of fine designs executed in costly materials, but the particular test of merit in the case of each exhibitor lies in the treatment of the inexpensive and simple pieces. In these the taste is impeccable. A number of bar pins set with abalone shells, cuff buttons, and other useful bits of decoration, are almost perfectly plain, but a fastidious selection has been made of the material, the handsome markings of which relieve the severity of the design. A large inkstand, with an inset of shell in the cover, illustrates an appropriate and attractive use of the overworked abalone, which henceforth is to be counted among the rare materials, its employment for such purposes having been forbidden by law. The execution of the several pieces is more noteworthy than the designs, a definite workmanlike standard having been achieved, and the product quite freed from the taint of amateurishness.

In the studio of Mr. Koppay, whose work is well known in this country, is a very fine portrait of Mr. John D. Rockefeller. There are two portraits, for that matter, one of which shows the subject seated in a more or less conventional attitude and dress, very much a man of the great world on which he has made so vivid an impression. This study is too general and unaccented to suit the painter's idea of his sitter's personality, and the second painting shows Mr. Rockefeller standing, his hands on his cane, looking shrewdly out from under somewhat forbidding brows, a figure of energy and capacity, [illegible] perity [illegible] his friends, [illegible] Mr. Koppay in getting at the man behind the fortune.

PARLOR SOCIALISTS HARASS AN AUTHOR

REV. GRANT TO HIS RESCUE

The Parlor Socialists held a spirited meeting last night. They had a brand-new book on Socialism to pick to pieces. Moreover, the author was on hand to say a word or two in his own defense. The book was "What Is Socialism?" and the author, Reginald Wright Kauffman, was scheduled to talk about "Anarchism, Communism, Paternalism, and Socialism."

Mr. Kauffman had been invited to the gathering of Parlor Socialists by the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, pastor of the Church of the Ascension, at Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street. After the regular Sunday night service in the church the Parlor Socialists and others of the congregation accompanied Mr. Kauffman to the parish house in West Eleventh Street, where the hostilities soon began. They grew so intense as the evening progressed that the Rev. Mr. Grant had to remind some of the Socialists that they were permitted to ask questions only, not to attack Mr. Kauffman and his views.

Mr. Kauffman, who has had quite some experience writing books, but never before a book on Socialism, began by telling the Parlor Socialists that he had ganed his first ideas of practical Socialism from the Rev. Alexander Irvine, whom he termed the Savonarola of the present age. He said that Socialism is often confused with Anarchism, Paternalism, and Communism, but that the true Socialism believes in more effective government of the true democratic kind.

He said, too, that Paternalism is a theory which would result in legislation which would so govern each individual act that the result would be pauperism. Socialism, said Mr. Kauffman, is the one solution of the means of abolishing such strikes as the one in Philadelphia, and of doing away with the black list and the boycott.

"Our leisure class consists of only spendthrifts and tramps nowadays," he said along toward the close of his speech. In this the Parlor Socialists seemed to agree with him, but not with all he said.

When the asking of questions was in order one Socialist wanted to know if the present struggle between capital and labor was not more in the industrial field than in the political field.

Mr. Kauffman agreed with him, and thought that politics was a reflection of classes. Then some one wanted to know Mr. Kauffman's definition of surplus value.

"Surplus value is the value produced by the worker over and above his wages and wear and tear on machinery," said the author. "It represents the profits of the employer."

At this point Sol Fieldman took up the cudgel. He said that the true definition of surplus value from the standpoint of the old died-in-the-wool Socialist, who knows his business, differs from Mr. Kauffman's.

"Before we can define surplus value we must define value," said Mr. Fieldman. "Labor power applied to natural resources, raw materials transformed into consumable and necessary wealth is the creation of value. When more wealth is created than necessary surplus value is created."

This definition seemed to meet with the approval of many present.

Then some of the Parlor Socialists wanted Mr. Kauffman to tell them what would be the best means of bringing about a Socialistic form of government. One suggested that a revolution such as has been going on in Philadelphia would be necessary rather than a social revolution by means of the ballot. Mr. Kauffman said he agreed with the questioner, and that he, too, was a revolutionist, but that when a change of government was brought about it would be by the majority whether through ballot or revolution of another kind.

"In the event of a Socialist victory at the National election, what would be the first step to take?" some one asked.

"I don't think the Socialists would call on me for my opinion," said Mr. Kauffman.

Mr. Fieldman, before he was choked off by Mr. Grant, said that some writers lately have been entirely too prone to set themselves up as authorities on Socialism before knowing all there is to know about the subject.

"Learn first and write afterward," he said.
